Senators Vote Millions for Farmers, 75-2

Plan Would Peg Price of Cotton, Wheat and and Corn.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—By a top-heavy 75-to-2 vote, the senate today approved a measure intended to put millions of dollars into the pockets of farmers through government loans pegging the price of cotton, wheat, corn, and possibly tobacco.

The legislation, ordering government loans at 85 per cent of parity prices, now goes to President Roosevelt and some congressional leaders speculated on a possible veto.

Suggestions that the price-boosting loans might increase costs for consumers drew a chorus of rebuffs from Democrats and Republicans alike in senate debate of less than an hour.

Tobacco and Rice.

The legislation also covered tobacco and rice but Senator Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, floor manager, said only corn, wheat and cotton actually were involved because tobacco and rice growers "are now above parity prices."

A parity price, he explained, was one that would give a farmer the same relative purchasing power he had in the pre-war (1909-1913) period.

Bankhead said that the proposed new loans would be 12.49 cents a pound on cotton, 69.87 cents a bushel on corn and 96.22 cents a bushel on wheat. This was considerably above past loans, Bankhead continued, but market prices of these crops had been climbing recently.

Senator Hatch, Democrat, New Mexico, first raised the question of increased costs to consumers and called attention to reports from some economists that the higher loans might cause price increases of 10 to 20 per cent in some foods.

"Those statements are not true," Bankhead said after Hatch explained that he did not believe estimates came from "theorists" who always sought any congressional attempt to be "fair with farmers."

Calamity Howlers.

Senator Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, said that every time there had been an increase in farm prices "we have been told that calamity howlers talk about the consumers. I do not think that we in this body ought to make peons and paupers out of the producers of that which sustains our lives, even though it does raise the prices to consumers, and I do not admit that at all."

Smith contended that higher loans "will not cost the government a penny" because "the market price always exceeds the loan price."

From the Republican side, Senators McNary and Taft both said they favored a just return to farmers. Only Senators Gerry, Democrat, Rhode Island, and Danaher, Republican, Connecticut, voted "no." The house yesterday approved the measure 275 to 63.

HATTON W. SUMMERS
"Germany Must Fire First."

Germans Must Fire First Shot, Says Summers

House Judiciary Head
Visiting at Home of Sister Here.

Whenever the harm we're doing to Germany by serving as England's arsenal becomes greater than the harm we could do if we assumed a more active belligerent attitude and had to turn our productive energy to our own uses alone—that day Germany is going to force us into a shooting war, Representative Hatton Summers, of Texas, declared here yesterday.

When that time will be, no man can foresee, the chairman of the powerful House Judiciary Committee, here for a rest at the home of his sister, Mrs. Willis J. Davis, on East Lake drive, declared.

"It may be when we start conveying ships and Germany assumes that we are going to shoot our way across the ocean," he said. Asked if this meant we were sure to start conveying, and that soon, he declined to reply, saying, instead:

"A man can get quite a reputation as a prophet by predicting what and when something is going to occur. If he's right, he's wise. If he's wrong—"

"I may be funny about it, but I don't think a man in my job ought to do much talking. I feel like the people hired me to work, not talk."

"I think that's a good idea for the whole nation in times like these. Bank when this whole business began I worked out what I thought would be a pretty good

Robert Messey, 12, Tries To Pierce Veil of Confusion.

By LAMAR BALL.

Constitution Staff Writer.

WAYNESBORO, Ga., May 14.—Twelve-year-old Robert Messey, who has just heard himself sentenced to life for the murder of his father, spends lonely hours, day and night, sitting on the edge of his cell bunk trying to puzzle out just what it all means, winding up nowhere but in a bluish alley of hopeless confusion.

Robert finds himself unable to reason out just what they mean by life, this thing they talk about when they tell him he is being punished.

"A man told me the other day it is what we do with ourselves here on earth," he stammered out today, as he haltingly tried to describe his own life back home before the crime and in jail since his arrest.

Back home, life was a constant wrangle with his father, as he pictures it. In the jail, everyone is

F. D. R. Asked To Intervene in Act of Hitler's Rail Crisis Here

A., B. & C. President Wires
Washington of Formal Strike Notice.

President Roosevelt yesterday was asked to intervene to prevent a strike of train, engine and yard service men of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Coast Railroad—the only line serving two of the nation's largest defense projects.

The threatened strike would tie up shipment of materials to the $52,000,000 smokeless powder plant being constructed for the du Pont Company near Tallapoosa, Ala., and the $15,000,000 bag loading plant near Talladega, Ala.

Officials of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen announced the strike would begin at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning.

At the same time, it was disclosed that Colonel B. L. Bugg, president of the railroad, had sent a telegram to Robert F. Cole, secretary of the National Mediation Board in Washington.

Bugg's Telegram.

Colonel Bugg's telegram stated: "We are unable to see that arbitration can be helpful in our case. Request that you notify the President of the threatened interruption of interstate commerce as provided under terms of the railway labor act."

By "terms of the act" it was explained that the President can, if he so decides, appoint an Emergency Board to conduct hearings on the controversy and make recommendations and state opinions on the case within 30 days after appointment of members to the board by the President.

However, it was pointed out that it is not compulsory for the parties involved to accept the findings of the Emergency Board. In this respect, the Emergency Board differs from the Arbitration Board, decisions of which are binding upon both parties.

Strike Called.

Notice that the strike had been called, following balloting by 375 engine, train and yard service men of the road, was contained in a letter to Colonel Bugg. The letter was signed by C. H. Keenen, vice president of the Brotherhood of

Leaders Admit Act of Hitler's Aide Shocking

Propaganda Mill Is Grinding Swiftly To Control Sentiment.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

BERLIN, May 14.—Germany's national shock-absorber, the Nazi party organization, flung itself today, under Adolf Hitler's direction, into the task of giving the population an explanation of what lay back of the flight to Scotland of Rudolf Hess, the Fuehrer's deputy.

The first step was taken yesterday, when Hitler met his district leaders. Step by step the official reassurances will be spread out over all Germany, down to the remotest villages.

Nazi leaders frankly admitted the shock of having the Fuehrer's personal friend and one of his most devoted followers suddenly fly out of the "family circle" into the camp of the enemy would be tremendous. But they insisted that the party organization was designed to meet just such a situation as this.

One of the first signs that the party organization had taken over the job of quieting unrest in the public mind was the abrupt disappearance from newspapers of stories on one of the most disturbing events Germany has experienced in years.

Does Not Rely on Papers.

In its propaganda machinery Germany does not depend upon newspapers or radio to handle the most difficult problems of shaping or controlling public sentiment. That job falls to the party organization, which reaches down to every block in every city and town in Germany.

Only a trifling remnant of the population, living on isolated farms, may fail to feel the direct impact of the party's effort to mobilize public sentiment into a belief that the Hess incident had no deep-seated significance.

What the message to the population is to be can be only partly surmised from what already has been made public. These things are held in tightest secrecy by the party leadership until they finally are passed out to the persons who must make the house-to-house canvass of the population.

The thing works this way: From

Foes Postpone Showdown on Convoy Issue

Opponent of U. S. Naval Escorts Denies Act Is
'Retreat.'

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—A senate fight on the convoy issue was postponed today when a group of senators favoring a ban on United States naval escorts for war supplies decided against trying to tack such a prohibition on the pending ship seizure bill.

"This involves no element of retreat at all," Senator Tobey, Republican, New Hampshire, told reporters after a meeting at which the decision was reached. "The issue is still very much alive and will be presented to the senate. It's just a matter of finding the best way to present it."

The anti-convoy senators reported a general feeling that it would be better to wait until Mr. Roosevelt makes his speech of May 27. They would prefer, they said, that the issue be raised first by the administration.

The meeting was held at the close of a day which the senate devoted largely to debating the ship seizure bill. This measure would empower President Roosevelt to take formal possession of foreign ships idle in American ports and put them to use as he sees fit.

During the debate, Senator Bailey, Democrat, North Carolina, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee and advocate of the pending bill, conceded that if Axis ships were transferred to England, such action might invite war-like retaliation from Germany. The administration, he added, has no intention of making such a transfer.

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, presented an amendment to forbid the transfer to one belligerent of the ships of its adversary. Such a transfer, he said, would be a "needless and provocative act of war."

Talmadge Raps Journal Owner For Stand on Four-Year Term

Cox Accused in Governor's Newspaper of 'Trying To Come Back and Be the Political Boss of Georgia.'

Governor Talmadge yesterday launched an editorial attack on James M. Cox, owner of the Atlanta Journal and former Governor of Ohio, because of the newspaper's stand on the four-year term amendment and accused Cox of "trying to come back and be the political boss of Georgia."

The controversy between the Governor and Cox grew out of a Journal editorial of May 7 which linked the proposed four-year term with Georgia's carpetbag days by asking the question, "Is Georgia willing to go back to the plan contrived by and for the carpetbag regime?"

Governor Talmadge, in yesterday's issue of his political publication, The Statesman, replied strongly to this editorial by saying:

"It is not becoming of James M. Cox's so-called paper to stir up memories of the carpetbag days in Georgia."

"Cox's sympathies were not with the south, they were with the carpetbaggers then, and are with them today."

Under a four-column headline which said, "Governor Flays Journal for Reference to Carpetbaggers," Governor Talmadge devoted two columns of his publication to the tirade against Cox.

The full texts of the Governor's attack and the Journal editorial follow:

Do newspapers fool anyone? In answering this question, I think that propaganda carried as news items certainly fool the people for a while, or a majority of them.

Editorials are supposed to reflect the policy of the paper, and their honest conviction on public affairs.

A paper that carries thoughtful, honest editorials, has a strong influence on public sentiment, and can be of a great help to the section it serves.

How many people read editorials in the daily papers? Very, very few.

Be Sure to Have A Match at Big Music Festival

21 Bands, Fireworks
Stunts Will Mark
Great Show.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

Remember how it was last year when the big spotlights went black, and 28,000 people sat there in the velvet darkness of a warm May night?

And the great gasp of surprise, like the sudden rush of a wind, that went up from the massed thousands as John Fulton gave the signal and everybody struck a match?

Remember how the mammoth stadium turned into one great glowing bowl of soft light, lit by the flickering match flames that looked like a host of stars?

Well, it's going to be done again this year as The Constitution gives its annual party to the people of Atlanta—the third Greater Atlanta Music Festival that comes to Grant Field on Friday night at 8 o'clock—free to one and all.

So don't forget your matches. Kitchen matches, paper matches, pocket lighters or anything that will make a little flame. Bring plenty, for last year people liked it so well it had to be done again and again, and it probably will be that way this year too.

Unbelievably Beautiful.
Last year it was the most unbelievably beautiful sight ever seen in a football stadium. This year there'll be another stunt to make the most unbelievably beautiful

British Report Officer Sought To Reach Duke

Agree With Nazis Hitler
Aide Had Contacted
Nobleman.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

A solution to the mystery of Rudolf Hess' flight to Scotland—that his purpose was to meet the Duke of Hamilton and try to set off a sort of one-man peace offensive—appeared to have been reached last night.

Both Britain and Germany agreed that Hess—who had stood as No. 3 man in the Nazi party before his extraordinary departure from the homeland—had set out to talk to the young nobleman about ending the war.

The Germans called him a deluded and self-appointed Messiah who apparently had thought that the Duke—an R. A. F. squadron leader—was an influential pacifist who might be somehow enlisted to try to help end the war.

Urges of Long Standing.

The British went no farther immediately than to say that the fugitive Nazi was trying "to bring about some peace negotiations."

Some of the Hess mystery will be lifted today when Prime Minister Churchill gives the house of commons a preliminary report on what has been learned of the bewildering flight.

The British Press Association reported that Hess not only had parachuted down to within a few miles of the Duke's Scottish seat of Dungavel but that this urge for a talk had been one of long standing. For, it was added:

"It can now be disclosed that Rudolf Hess had made an attempt to communicate with the Duke of Hamilton some months previously."

"The Duke immediately placed the letter in the hands of our security authorities and no reply was made to Hess."

"The Duke had met Hess on one or two occasions before the war in connection with matters of sport in which they were both interested."

While there was no official confirmation of Hess' mysterious peace, reliable sources said that since his arrival by plane and parachute Saturday night, Hess had given the British government "highly useful information."

Did See Duke.

Hess did finally see the Duke, but only after he was under guard in a Glasgow hospital, under treatment for an ankle fracture suffered in his parachute leap from a commandeered Messerschmitt plane in which he flew from Germany Saturday night.

What they discussed was not disclosed. That Hess was bound on his mysterious mission directly to the Duke was left in no doubt whatever. It was announced that he had with him a map on which his course from Augsburg, Bavaria, to the Duke's estate at Dungavel, Scotland, was marked in blue pencil.

The Duke's castle was ringed as journey's end.

Hess landed less than 15 miles away, an amazing feat of navigation considering the means at his command.

When he came down near New-

Nazis See British 'Bitter Awakening'

BERLIN, May 14.—(AP)—"The world at large soon will have occasion to forget the Hess incident," official Nazi spokesmen declared today, saying:

"It will be overshadowed by events of vast importance."

Dienst Aus Deutschland, German commentary close to the foreign office, said: "In any event there is the conviction in Berlin that England can continue and promote her illusory policy in this manner for only a few days, because very soon the bitter awakening will follow."

Husband Finds Joy in Jail, Still Bars Alimony

E. C. Driver Perfectly Content To Live in Fulton Tower.

By CAROLYN MCKENZIE.
Happiness is where you find it—or where you seek it—or something to that effect, and E. C. Driver has found it though he probably would be living his normal life if that Irish-English blood of his hadn't flared up.

He has found a haven of contentment in the cells of the Fulton Tower—away from his wife, free to spend his money as he sees fit (and he says he can really dispose of it because his son calls each day and makes his list of purchases for him), free to smoke his pipe, listen to his radio, and sleep on a bed which is okay, he says, once he gets it built up in places.

It happened this way: Driver isn't opposed to alimony. He definitely isn't opposed to marriage.

"It's all right to pay a woman alimony if you can't live with her just 'cause you and 'her' can't iron out your little problems."

But he isn't willing to pay $35 alimony when he figures he owes only $30.

When he and his wife decided to cut the strings, the government agreed to give Mrs. Driver $30 each month out of Driver's $150 monthly compensation.

That worked until a few months ago when the cost of living went up.

Then the wife decided she should have an additional $5 each month, took it to the courts and he was charged $40 court costs plus the additional monthly alimony.

So he bucked. "I'd rather die and go to torment," he said, "than to give her another nickel."

Now he's away from it all and he's happy.

Driver likes the jail. He has a little cubby-hole with a couple of soap boxes, a radio, a wash pan, a bunk, and a few clothes hooks. It isn't a corner room or even an outside room, but he can park his rolling chair just outside his cell door, and he has a former hospital orderly to help him in and out of his chair after a rest.

He's perfectly happy. "This jail place is swell," he says. "I can do what I want to, buy what I want to, and I don't have to spend that extra alimony on my wife either. I just don't think she's worth it. The government promised her $30 and that's all she's gonna get. I'll stay here until the jail rots, or burns, or crumbles to bits—anything to keep from paying her that extra money."

Driver doesn't know if he ever will be permitted to get out and get some recreation or fresh air. He doesn't care. He's away from everything in jail and he's having the time of his life.

He's beating his wife one way. She may be happy that he's in jail, he says, "but she ain't getting no more money outta me and that's where I've got her."

Planning Body Asks Power To Kill Licenses

Fulton Asked To Zone New Buford, Marietta Highways.

The right to share with the board of county commissioners the power to approve or reject petitions for places of amusement to be located in unincorporated areas was requested yesterday by the Fulton planning commission.

In a special resolution sent to the board for action at its next meeting, the planning commission asked that "no licenses or permits be granted for places of amusement which the public and the commission believe would be detrimental to property values and the general welfare."

The resolution also asked that the board of commissioners zone the New Buford and New Marietta highways against commercial uses of any nature, "including trailer camps, lunch rooms and places of amusement."

At its meeting yesterday the planning commission postponed action on all petitions for rezoning the Cheshire bridge road. It denied a petition to rezone the Cal Cates property on Mt. Vernon and Powers Ferry road.

A petition of Daniel D. Sherman to erect a filling station at Moreland and McDonough roads was granted yesterday a set-back be included great enough to make way for possible street widening.

The resolution by Walter S. McNeal, seconded by Frank H. Neely, follows: "Whereas, during the past several weeks various members of the planning commission have had it called to their attention that more intense uses of prop-

Scientist Finds Plenty Room in Whale's Gullet

Goes on Slimy Trip To Learn How Jonah Did It.

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—(P)—A scientist came up with an affirmative answer today to the question of whether the whale could have swallowed Jonah.

Just to make certain, Dr. Eugene Maximilian Karl Geiling, professor of pharmacology at the University of Chicago, said he crawled through the gullet of one of the big creatures.

This whale, of course, was dead. "It was a pretty slimy trip," Dr. Geiling remarked, "but there was plenty of room."

Whalers Concur. "And a number of the whalers up along the west coast of Canada, whose families have been whaling for generations back, say their fathers told them of unquestioned cases in which men thrown overboard were swallowed."

Dr. Geiling told of his trip into a whale while here to receive Villanova College's Mendel medal, awarded annually for outstanding achievement in science. The medal was given, incidentally, not for his interest in whales, but for his contributions to the knowledge of the pituitary gland, its relation to other glands, and his assistance in the crystallization of insulin.

Study Is Sidelined. Dr. Geiling took up the study of whales years ago as a sideline to his interest in the pituitary gland and because the public and the whale are of such whopper size.

Since then, as scientific supercargo on many whaling ships, he has assembled these whale facts: The sperm whale is the only one large enough to have swallowed Jonah. The largest animal now on the earth, some sperms reach a length of 88 feet.

A whale baby comes from an egg no larger than the human ovum, but it is 20 feet long and weighs two tons when it is born.

Federal Plants For Aluminum Being Studied

Move Considered To Meet U. S. Defense Needs.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(P)—Government-owned aluminum plants to meet defense needs were reported in informed quarters today to be under consideration by the Office of Production Management. Secretary Ickes advised the OPM, it was learned, that he would like to provide the power from the Columbia river hydro-electric project.

Ickes was understood to have told the OPM that additional power from the Columbia river could not be made available to the Aluminum Company of America because of a law against "the monopolization thereof by limited groups."

The government plants probably would be located in the Bonnevill and Grand Coulee dam areas of the northwest and in the Tennessee River Valley.

It was indicated that they might be operated by Alcoa, the Reynolds Metals Company or another private concern under an arrangement similar to that for a tank factory at Detroit which is owned by the government and managed by the Chrysler Corporation. Meanwhile G. R. Gibbons, senior vice president of Alcoa, told the senate committee investigating the defense program that when the Defense Advisory Commission announced last November that there was sufficient aluminum to meet all civilian and military requirements, his company was already unable to fill civilian orders.

Dairy Group Here To Hold Meeting

The meeting is scheduled for 11 o'clock at the Robert Fulton hotel. A large attendance is expected, Mrs. Rees said. Columbus Roberts is chairman for the month.

BOOKS ARE GOOD FRIENDS—Life's only solace for Robert Messex today is the reading he struggles over in his jail cell at Waynesboro, Ga., where he has begun a life sentence for the murder of his father. The boy killed his father for whipping him.

HE'S A GOOD MAN—Deputy Sheriff O. J. Cliette, of Burke county, has won the admiration of 12-year-old Robert Messex for his kindnesses. The deputy, who is Burke county's jailer, always tries to be near when the boy drops off to sleep at night.

Life? . . . Boy Killer Wonders

of age, Robert can look through the bars of the window down on a green of the Waynesboro Country Club's golf course. There he sees boys, 12 and 13 years old, caddy-ing for the golfers.

"They seem to be having a swell time, even if that is work," he commented today.

It was the night of April 29, just half a month ago, that this 12-year-old boy lifted the shotgun off the wall and slipped out the front door of his home to ambush his father and end forever the dissension that existed between them over the annoying problems of school.

The frail youngster tiptoed around to a side window of the farmhouse where the family lived near Vidette, Ga., in Burke county, and silently watched. His father moved into a back room of the house to slake his thirst at the water bucket. As the man lifted the dipper to his mouth, the back of his head was less than 10 feet from the muzzle of the gun the boy was aiming from the darkness outside the window. The father's head tilted back and the boy pulled the trigger. The blast penetrated the man's neck near his right ear and he dropped back dead, never knowing what had struck him.

Hand Suspected. The boy slipped back into the house and leaned the gun against the wall in the corner of a bedroom. The frantic family summoned help, doctors and police streamed to the lonely farm. A farm hand was suspected at first, and bloodhounds were brought into the search. The dogs sniffed about, bayed, but refused to move away from the house. Deputy Sheriff O. J. Cliette, who was in charge of the search, became suspicious. He questioned the boy further, although young Robert had told him he had heard the shot and had seized the shotgun to go after the slayer of his father.

"When did your father whip you last, Robert?" Deputy Cliette asked. "Just before dinner," the lad answered, sullenly.

Cliette seized this clue, and after just a few more minutes of questioning, the boy confessed to the slaying.

That was just 15 days ago.

Yesterday, Judge A. L. Franklin, on the recommendation of a jury, sentenced young Robert to prison for life, stipulating that the boy serve in the training school at Milledgeville until he reaches the age of 21. After that, an appeal may be considered for commutation of the boy's sentence.

"It was the best thing that could be done," all Waynesboro says today. And hearty agreement to this came from Will Messex, grandfather of Robert.

Jail Fascinating. So, today Robert sits in a cell in the Waynesboro jail, waiting to be transferred to Milledgeville.

Robert would like to go back to the farm, but this life in jail has a fascination for him that he finds difficult to describe.

For one thing, he says, Jailer Cliette is mighty kind about buying him ice cream.

"I like ice cream," he confesses. "I never did get much of it at home."

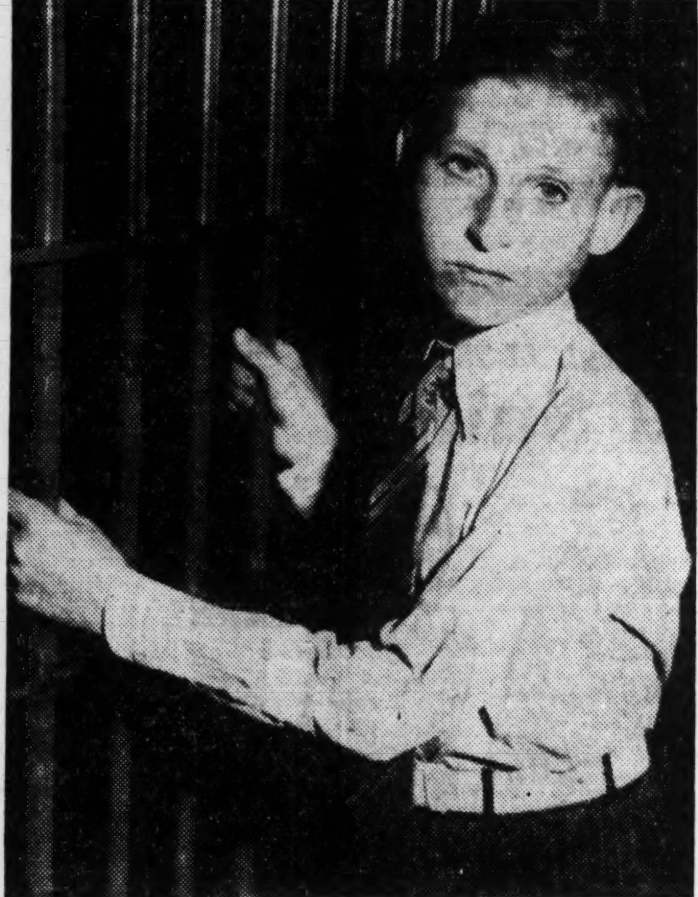

When he was brought into the prison, his hair was matted, his clothes were dirty and his body was in serious need of soap and water.

First Shower. Inside the cell block there was a shower bath—the first he had ever seen. Now, he is taking three or four baths a day. "He can't overdo it," says Jailer Cliette.

Today, Robert has clean clothes, he is proud of the pajamas he wears at night, he slips into a clean shirt and begs anyone near by to help him with his necktie—a colorful bit of haberdashery of which he is obviously proud.

"Now that I think about it," he said today, "my father wasn't so bad. He whipped me with his belt and it hurt. The marks on my back where he whipped me just cleared up yesterday. But I shouldn't have killed him."

Should Listen. "I think any other boy, like me, who is having trouble with his father ought to be good. He ought to listen to his father. If he don't understand his father when his father talks to him, he ought to ask his father to repeat what he said. Then, he won't get a beating." "Mother has been nice to me since I been in jail. She comes to see me and she never says anything about what I did. She brings me things. I don't know what she's going to do about my brothers and sisters. I believe she's going to

IT'S NOT BAD HERE—A whole cell block has been set aside as the temporary home of young Robert Messex until he can be transferred to the State Training School for Boys, where he will begin serving a life term for the murder of his father.

hoe cotton. She can do that right well."

Robert has three sisters: Lucille, 14; Minnie Belle, 10; and Julia, 7. "Julia was always my best friend," he says with a reminiscent smile. "She and I used to play together all the time. We played 'They Ain't No Boogies Out Tonight.' It was lots of fun."

His two brothers are Rufus, four years old, and Jamse, two. "I don't mind it so much being in jail here. I'm sorta scared sleeping here by myself at night and when I first came here, I cried the first two or three nights, but I stopped that. It's sorta lonesome up here by myself with nobody to talk to at night but Mrs.

Cliette comes up and talks to me whenever I ask her to. She's real nice."

"They tell me it will be better over at Milledgeville. I hope so, but I don't see how it could be and, besides, it will be too far for my mother to come and see me and I guess I'll never see my sisters any more. 'Specially, Julia. I'll miss her."

Daniel Hebard, Lumber Dealer, Dies in Florida

Seller of Okefenokee Swamp to U. S. Successors in Florida.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. WAYCROSS, Ga., May 14.—Daniel Learned Hebard, 66, prominent lumberman who developed the town of Hebardville, near here, and directed operations in the Okefenokee swamp, later selling the swamp to the United States government, died last night in a Jacksonville hospital after a brief illness. He had lived in recent years at Coleraine, on the St. Mary's river, near Folkston, where he had developed a beautiful home and hunting preserve.

His father was a pioneer lumberman in Michigan. For many years Mr. Hebard was general manager and treasurer of the Charles Hebard & Sons Lumber Manufacturers in Michigan. He disposed of his interests here and became interested in the cypress industry in the Okefenokee swamp in south Georgia and was general manager and president of the Hebard Cypress Company and of the Hebard Lumber Company at Waycross.

Survivors are his wife; two daughters, Mrs. John Sise, of Hewlett, Long Island, N. Y., and Mrs. John Corning, of Philadelphia; one son, Frederick V. Hebard, and a sister, Mrs. Biddle R. Ardsen, also of Philadelphia.

Colt Firearm Strike Is Settled

By the Associated Press.

A two-day strike at Colt's Patent Firearms Manufacturing Company, largest American producer of machineguns, was settled at Hartford, Conn., last night and workers of the day shift were ordered to return to work at 7 a. m. (E. D. T.) today.

Robert F. Mintz, organizer for the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (CIO), representing 5,600 strikers, announced that terms of the settlement would add $2,000,000 to the company's annual pay roll in increased wages and liberalized vacation schedules.

More than 1,000 workers ratified the agreement at a closed mass meeting less than two hours after a mediation committee consisting of union and company representatives and federal and state authorities reached an accord on a tentative code applicable to the concern's huge Connecticut riverfront plant and two smaller factories in the city.

Vacations Provided. The terms of the settlement as announced by Mintz included a flat wage increase of seven cents an hour, a minimum of 45 cents an hour for women workers and 50 cents for men.

The agreement also provided a one-week vacation with pay for all employees with the company on January 1, 1941, which, the organizer said, would provide vacations for 2,000 additional workers. Piece work operators will also be given a wage adjustment.

A provision for time and a half for overtime was included in the settlement terms.

President Roosevelt went over the defense labor situation with Sidney Hillman yesterday, while other federal officials worked against a fast nearing deadline in their efforts to avert a strike at 60 General Motors plants.

Hillman, the associate director of OPM, told reporters after his White House call that he had reported specifically to the President on conditions on the west coast, where shipyard strikes have tied up a half billion dollars of naval construction. He also said that he had been in touch with the international president of the machinists' union at Seattle in an effort to end the shipyard strikes, which some labor leaders have called "outlaw" walkouts.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department reported that "the first break in the year-long rise of industrial output in the United States occurred in April" as a result of management-labor disputes.

"Further expansion of industries producing finished defense goods failed to offset reduced output in coal, automobiles and steel, and aggregate production declined for the first time in 12 months," the department said in a statement.

The General Motors strike, affecting 160,000 men, is scheduled to begin at 7 a. m. today unless a

Average British Views on Hess

LONDON, May 14.—(P)—Every Briton has his own idea about what to do with Rudolf Hess, Adolf Hitler's deserting deputy Fuehrer.

There are as many opinions as men on the street.

A suspicious, seamy-faced newspaper seller: "Take a good look at that foot (Hess's). Who can tell? When you're not looking he might kick you with it."

A brush-mustached taxi driver: "Put him in a room by himself to think; then I would go off and think."

A hotel doorman: "He sounds real to me. I would sound him out and, if he means what I think he means, make him head of the 'Free Germans.'"

A waitress: "I wouldn't believe a blooming, blinking thing he said."

A policeman: "Feed him well, treat him right, try to convince him he would help the world by helping us."

An office boy: "Let the Germans know where he is. If they try to bomb him, then I would know what to think and do."

A waiter: "Give him plenty of paper and pens and let him write then look it over and see what it's worth."

formula for all of us to follow. I felt that we should use all our resources of every kind to prepare as quickly as possible for any emergency. And in the meantime to do as little talking as possible with our mouths.

"We haven't done that. We've talked our heads off instead of working our heads off. As a result, we've talked ourselves a lot closer to war than we are ready for."

Of one thing the congressman seemed sure. Germany at least will have to fire the first shot. We'll come to the brink of war, but we won't take the step until the first overt belligerent act comes from the other side.

Reticent in speaking directly to the press, the gentleman from Texas spares no words in addressing the house. In a recent speech, after castigating Representative Fish, of New York, for facetiously suggesting air raid protection for Washington, he declared:

"... if we continue as we are going now... the conditions facetiously stated will become an actuality. ... Here we stand, challenging every nation on earth that is able to fight except Britain... yet step by step we are following in the footsteps of France."

"People get up here and play like children with the safety of the last remaining great republic on the face of God Almighty's earth. People are at play, having a big time going to parties, strutting, blustering and threatening as every day we come nearer to actual fighting... considering profits and gain when we are on the brink."

New Farm Market Sees Trade Upturn

Business is booming at the new State Farmers' Market at Murphy avenue and Sylvan road.

Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder reported yesterday that the average day's turnover of business was approximately twice that of the old market on Piedmont avenue.

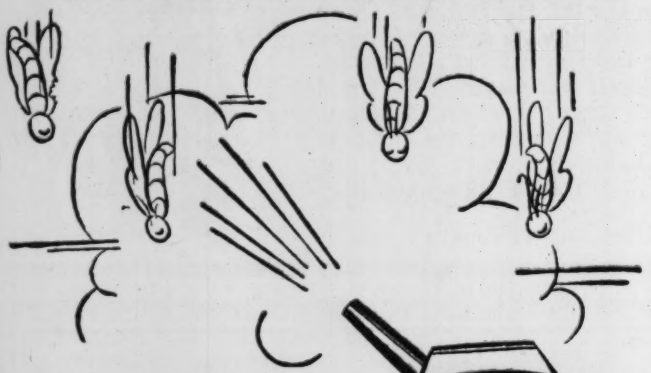

Although the market only opened last Saturday afternoon, Linder said the total business for Sunday alone amounted to $73,000. Of this amount $43,000 was carried on by merchants in the five produce buildings and $25,000 in the three open sheds.

The commissioners predicted the average transactions in the future would run about $45,000 a day for three days of the week, and about $80,000 per day for the rest of the week.

The average day's turnover at the old market was about $25,000 per day, Linder said.

Fulton Bailiffs Lose In Salary Dispute

The Georgia supreme court yesterday ruled against Fulton court bailiffs in their claims against the Fulton county commission for recovery of reductions in salaries over a period from 1932 to 1939.

Contending that his salary was set at $200 by law, Troy L. Carroll sued for $3,125 which he charged had been withheld from him. He said his salary dropped as low as $133.33 at one time.

The court held the county authorities had not approved payment of any of the amounts sought. The salaries were set at $200 in 1927, but the court interpreted the law to mean the county authorities each year could approve the maximum amount or any amount not exceeding the maximum.

Joe Parrish, Cartoonist, Visits City

Life of Chicago Tribune Illustrator Like 'Alger Story.'

By RALPH MCGILL.

Yesterday afternoon the editorial page cartoonist of the Chicago Tribune walked into the office, accompanied by his charming wife, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Parrish.

The years ran back on me and I remembered the first time I'd seen him. And her.

It's almost one of those Alger stories.

I was visiting in a small Tennessee town, Dickson, Tennessee, to be exact. The friend at whose home I was staying said, one day: "There is a high school boy in town who draws well. I promised him I'd bring you by."

We went. I recall that first meeting very well indeed. He was thin, shy and ambitious. He had drawn some sports cartoons of Nashville baseball players. I took them back and published them in the Nashville Banner, paying him a small price for them.

They were good. They were published not merely to give him a boost, but because the high school boy had something on the ball.

Later on I was able to help him get a regular job as a cartoonist, lay-out man and general newspaper artist.

He promptly got married. He married his high school sweetheart. A year later Joe Junior had arrived.

A short while later—three or four years—the Chicago Tribune sent for him. A couple of years later he was doing their editorial page cartoon. Today he is ranked as one of the half-dozen best cartoonists in America.

He and Mrs. Parrish left Atlanta to visit Liberty Hall. Their historical hero is Georgia's Alexander Stephens, vice president of the Confederacy and one of the nation's great men.

I couldn't resist the opportunity to present you two of Atlanta's visitors yesterday. Especially so, since Joe Parrish is, as he says, one of my newspaper "babies."

Colombian Envoy To Talk Defense

WASHINGTON, May 14. (AP)—Colombian Ambassador Gabriel Turbey returned to Washington today from consultation with his government prepared to discuss a broad program of co-operation between the United States and Colombia, including the vital subject of hemisphere defense. The envoy landed at Washington airport at 4:10 p. m.

The envoy said there was nothing specific he could say now on the subject of hemisphere defense bases in Colombia, and added: "When the time comes Colombia is ready to discuss this question not only with the United States but with all American republics in conformity with the Havana declaration and to put the policy of continental solidarity into practice."

Whiting Hits SEC Utility Breakup

NEW YORK, May 14. (AP)—Justin R. Whiting, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, said today in a report to stockholders that breaking up the big utilities system, as proposed by the Securities and Exchange Commission, would impair economic and efficient operation helpful to the national defense program.

Continuing the fight begun by his predecessor, Wendell L. Willkie, against the SEC's findings that the corporation should be divested of most of its operating subsidiaries, Whiting charged the SEC with confusing the situation with a new interpretation of what constitutes an integrated utility system.

Hurt Park Art Fair To Exhibit Saber's Work

Noted Young Painter Says Showing Will Uncover New Talent.

By WILLARD COPE.

One of America's younger important muralists, a Georgian by reason of service at Fort Benning, will be a headline exhibitor in The Constitution's gala Art Fair May 30 and 31 at Joel Hurt Park. He is Clifford Saber, of New York and California, who at 26 is raising a play of two or more pages, partly in color, in a forthcoming issue of "Life" Magazine. "I think the Art Fair is a tremendously important event," Saber said here yesterday on a flying visit, "and I'm glad of the chance to take part. The Fair should bring out a great volume of natural Georgia genius and awaken public response."

The Army is recognizing Saber's talents, although he is well along in his third month as a private of Company "C," 29th Infantry. He hopes to be assigned to camouflage activity.

Examples of Saber's work are to be seen in such disparate places as Rockefeller Center, New York, the Washington, D. C., zoo and the former home in Hollywood of Rudolph Valentino, now occupied by Juan Romero, dancer.

He studied at the Art Students' League in New York from 1929 to 1932 and was an art apprentice to David Paige, muralist member of the second Byrd expedition.

Enthusiasm was voiced by the visitor over Georgia's vast artistic possibilities. "I only hope I'll be able to stay here a year after I get through with the Army," he said. "Georgia is one of the most colorful places I've ever seen. It is so worthy of painting, of artistic interpretation generally."

In Atlanta and various parts of the state great interest was being shown yesterday in the Art Fair. It appeared certain a minimum of 100 artists would seize the opportunity to display without cost examples of their work to the thousands drawn to the Fair in midtown.

The Constitution will supply entry blanks on application. Individual artists will display their own works and offer them for sale.

The occasion will prove a medium for bringing together the artists of this region and the general public in a natural, gay setting.

It is anticipated that the idea will develop into numerous shows annually, in parks and school grounds.

More Moisture Needed Soon, Bureau Says

Cotton Stands Improved But Require Warmer Weather.

Although most sections of the state had adequate rain at the beginning of the week, there was no widespread rain and more moisture will be needed again soon, the Weather Bureau reported yesterday.

Cotton stands improved considerably following the rains in the southern half of the state. Planting is completed, or nearly completed, in the northern counties, but the soil still is too dry in limited areas. Warmer weather is needed.

Cool weather has hampered the growth of corn in the state, but some improvement in stands was noted following the rains.

Wheat and oats improved greatly this week, but are still showing the effects of the dry weather. Both crops are ripening in the southern half and the oats harvest is getting well under way.

Conditions for Irish potato growth continue from good to excellent in the south, but some areas need more rain.

Much improvement was noted in truck crops following the rain, but additional moisture and warmer weather are needed.

Peaches are growing rapidly and are in good condition where well sprayed. The curculio infestation is heavy.

Pastures and meadows are greatly improved and good growth is reported in most places. Some areas still need more rain.

Washington Considers Broad Aid to Cottonseed

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—The Senate Agriculture Committee today recommended establishment of a broad federal grading and market news service for cottonseed and its products throughout the cotton belt.

The group reported favorably to the senate legislation already passed by the house which would establish these services under the Department of Agriculture.

Senators said the measure should increase income of cotton growers by requiring ginner to classify cottonseed and products according to standards established by federal agents.

Atlanta House Buyers Profit, Visitor Says

N. Y. Housing Editor Thinks Purchasers Getting 'Money's Worth'

Atlanta folk who are buying houses are getting a great deal of house for their money, Miss Dorothy Ducas, housing editor of the New York Herald Tribune, in Atlanta yesterday to do a piece for her paper about building hereabouts, believes.

"I was particularly interested in houses in the $5,000 price range," she said, "and I find that people here are getting exceptionally large, well-constructed homes for that amount of money."

"Not only are the homes well constructed, but they are well equipped. The plumbing, the hardware, and particularly the kitchen equipment such as sinks, cabinets, etc., are sturdy, modern and well constructed."

There were a few things Miss Ducas, who is co-author of a book called "More House for Your Money," thought could be a little better, though. She feels that some of the houses are not quite up to snuff architecturally. They sprawl and ramble a little too much, and some of them trend away from simplicity. This she believes arises from the fact that in subdivisions the same size of houses must be altered to vary the exterior appearance of the house and this switching around results in some uneconomic arrangements.

Privately built houses, she thinks, where no architect is employed, suffer sometimes from the owner's own variations of a stock plan. The best plan is to stick closely to the idea an architect has labored over. Small changes may throw things out of kilter. Miss Ducas will look at Birmingham's houses today.

has been negotiating for the plant for some time. The tract is located on Fry street, with ample railroad facilities, and the immediate investment will be about $35,000. The first building of the canning unit will provide 50,000 square feet of floor space.

Supreme Court Gallant, Stern With Chi Omega

Softens Blow of Decision With Flattering Implication.

Those gallant gentlemen on the state supreme court had to rule against the wishes of a host of pretty girls yesterday, but they softened the blow of their decision by the flattering implication that the young ladies in question were very nice people indeed.

It seems that the Chi Omega sorority at Athens had sought to enjoin the city of Athens and the county of Clarke against collection of ad valorem taxes on their state old home on Milledge avenue, because the order was, in a sense, a charitable organization.

Any money, its attorney explained, over and above the running expenses of the house, went into a scholarship fund by which some girl might be educated who otherwise could not afford college.

The court pondered this point. Then it thought of other things. Such as the fact that membership in the sorority is by invitation only. That it charges an initiation fee ($60). That its charges for room and board are the same as those fixed by the university for other students.

Then it rendered its decision, upholding Clarke superior court. "There is not the slightest suggestion," it held, "that this is a house for the underprivileged. Its sheltering arms are not alone for those who are poor in this world's goods."

Since the sisterhood numbers among its members at least two—Miss Ann Garrett and Miss Jean Pentecost—whose debut parties last year were among the high-lights of the social season, and lists among others from Atlanta Miss Jeannette Cox, Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, Miss Mary Brooks, Miss Dorothy See, Miss Virginia Wayne and Miss Lollie Howard, the court's latter point, at least, seems well taken.

Nazis Arrive In Near East; Plan Unknown

Go by Plane to Syria; May Precede Aid to Iraqis.

CAIRO, May 14.—(AP)—German personnel has arrived by plane in Syria, according to unofficial but reliable information received here today.

There are at least three possibilities envisioned in the reported arrival of Germans in Syria. 1. Adolf Hitler may have decided to send help at last to the Iraqis fighting Britain in lands adjacent to the French territory. 2. Germany may, under some secret plan of collaboration with the French, be preparing another step in the long-talked-of drive on the Suez canal and Egypt. 3. It may be that some Germans have merely gone to Syria on matters connected with the French-German armistice. Syria would be a prime jumping-off place for a German move to help Iraq or to attack the canal.

Ethridge Quits Radio's Survey, Denounces FCC

President Deceived, Almost Betrayed by Report, He Says.

ST. LOUIS, May 14.—(AP)—Mark Ethridge, Louisville radio and newspaper executive, declared today he believed President Roosevelt "was deceived" and "almost betrayed" regarding troubles in the radio industry.

He referred to the recent anti-monopoly report of the Federal Communications Commission ordering broad revisions in the internal structure of the broadcasting system. Simultaneously Ethridge, general manager of radio station WHAS, Louisville, and a former president of the National Association of Broadcasters, announced his resignation of a commission by President Roosevelt to make a survey of the radio industry. "That work has been destroyed not only by the text and tone of the commission's order," Ethridge asserted, "but by the evident determination of the commission to precipitate action, to forestall the expression of views by any other agency."

Asserting he felt the FCC had gone beyond "any powers conferred in the law," he said:

"I firmly believe the President was deceived as to the extent of radio's ills and almost betrayed in not being told the divisive possibilities of the sort of fight which was being invited."

His address before a general session of the N. A. B. convention was interrupted frequently by applause.

Chairman James L. Fly of the FCC, who told the radio men yesterday the commission "has no desire and no plans" to take over the nation's broadcasting system, was just three seats away at the head table. Neville Miller, N. A. B. president, adjourned the meeting without calling on Fly, who left the room immediately.

Later Miller issued a statement saying he had called upon Fly in his hotel room and invited him to reply to Ethridge's remarks if he desired.

Ethridge reiterated his belief that the federal communications law "belongs to the horse and buggy days." He quoted President Roosevelt as having expressed a similar opinion as far back as January, 1939.

"I have never abandoned that idea for a moment," the Kentuckian stated. "In fact, since Mr. Fly took office, I have felt all the more strongly about it."

Ethridge said he had never defended the status quo in radio, but asserted he found most radio operators were willing to take their chances "with the most stringent sort of government regulation" if assured of two things:

That the regulation is honest and intelligent, and that assurance is given that what is done is not done to produce chaos and "further an eventual taking over by the government."

Ethridge then remarked he did not believe this assurance would come until the President and congress jointly enunciate a policy under which the FCC shall regulate—a policy "so clear there can be no mistake in the minds of anybody."

Roosevelt Intervention Asked

Locomotive Firemen and Trainmen, and E. C. Oster, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

The letter stated the walkout—which would halt operation of approximately 23 freight and passenger trains daily—would take place "unless satisfactory settlement of the dispute concerning wages and working conditions can be reached before that time."

The union officials stated the strike would not affect employees not in the "transportation group" if they (the employees) had anything to do.

Union Tells Plans.
They added they did not plan to request intervention of President Roosevelt or the Arbitration Board, charging that Colonel Bugg had declined to meet with the Arbitration Board.

Keenen said the principal demand of the workers was for "standard rates, that is, rates in effect on neighboring lines," adding that the salient points with regard to working conditions were seniority and promotions, and regulation of mileage.

Commenting on the demands for working conditions, Keenen said: "This wouldn't cost the railroad one cent. Roads much smaller than the A. B. & C. have them. In a prepared statement written before the strike notice was posted, Colonel Bugg said that if the road raised the wages of the 378 it would feel duty bound to do the same for the 1,125 other employees."

Commenting on this, Keenen said: "The railroad's claim that wage increases would cost them $800,000 to $700,000 a year are predicated on the bases of increases for all employees. We don't agree that the increases we seek would cost anywhere near that amount."

Figures Criticized.
"Colonel Bugg's figures would mean an increase of $142 a month for our men, which is way out of the proportion for which we have been asking."

The railroad runs approximately eight passenger trains and 15 freight trains. The runs, and some of their mileage, are: Birmingham, Ala., to Waycross, Ga., 78 miles; Atlanta to Brunswick, 334 miles; Atlanta to Waycross, 279 miles; Manchester to Birmingham, 198 miles; a spur line from Fitzgerald to Thomasville, 82 miles.

The trains include the streamlined Dixie Flagler, which goes from Atlanta to Waycross on its run from Chicago to Miami. The "Dixieland" is another crack Chicago-to-Miami train which runs over that route, but operates only in winter.

It was pointed out that the A. B. & C. is the only road which now serves the Coosa River ordnance plant, a $15,000,000 bag-loading plant near Talladega, and the Alabama Ordnance Works, a $52,000,000 smokeless-powder plant being built for the duPont company at Talladega, near the other plant. Both are about 40 miles from Birmingham.

The Brecon Loading Company, a subsidiary of The Coca-Cola Company, will manage and operate the bag-loading plant. This company was formed at the request of the government, to handle the operation and management of what will be one of the country's largest bag-loading plants.

The War Department is building this plant. W. N. Cochran, vice president in charge of production for The Coca-Cola Company, will be in charge of operating the plant, which will load smokeless powder into bags.

Authorization for a spur track about a mile long, to run from the A. B. & C.'s main line at Talladega, has been granted, and construction of this track, which will go directly to the bag-loading plant, will begin soon, it was understood.

The spur track from the A. B. & C.'s main line from Talladega to the powder plant has been built. It is the only line carrying materials to the plant. At present, eight to 10 freight cars carry materials to the site. When the plant is finished, the tonnage will be tremendous.

It was pointed out that, in the present situation, the Southern Railway runs from Talladega southward to Childersburg, Ala., a few miles from the powder plant, but that it would be impossible to truck materials into the plant, as there are two small creeks in the way. These are the Talladega and the Talladega.

There are small bridges, with limited ton capacity, over the creeks at points near Childersburg and Kymulga.

The following statement to all employees of the railroad:

"To All Employees:
"Can a strike win? In order to win a strike two objectives must be attained:
"(1) An increase of pay.
"(2) Recovery of jobs."

"The failure of either of these results means the loss of a strike."
"(1) Can an increase of pay be obtained in this case?
"Since the reorganization of the railroad, January 1, 1927, the employees have received in wages all the revenue it has been able to produce, except the necessary expenditures for materials and supplies, like coal, lumber, cross ties, etc., and taxes assessed by federal, state and municipal authorities. Taxes have not been paid in full for the years 1937, 1938, 1939 and 1940, and more than $450,000 is past due. If the payment of these taxes had not been deferred, employees could not have been paid off and would now be more than two months behind with pay days.
"No business can continue indefinitely to pay out more than it takes in. As there is no money with which to pay more wages, it is the unanswerable conclusion that an increase of pay cannot be obtained by a strike."

"(2) Can jobs thrown down in a strike be recovered?
"Two contingencies are possible:
"(a) Others may be willing to work in the jobs abandoned, in which case jobs would not be recovered by strikers.
"(b) If the jobs could not be filled with others, the railroad would have to lie inoperative and eventually be abandoned and scrapped. In that case there would be no jobs for any one."

"In either of these contingencies, would the strike be won? It would be like betting some one you could jump out of a tenth-story window. You might win the bet, but — — ?
"Very truly yours,
"B. L. BUGG,
"President."

Carrot and Cabbage Corsages As Farmerettes Graduate Here

Bedecked in carrot corsages, mint and cherry nosegays, or carrying cabbage bouquets, 13 farmerettes were graduated yesterday from the Atlanta Opportunity school.

Members of the group, which calls itself the Pioneers' Club, vary in age from mamas to grandmamas and all displayed their wares with pride. Green peas, squash and asparagus make a nice shoulder decoration, one thought. While another wore an epaulet of radishes and strawberries. The piece de resistance of the creations was sported by the teacher of the class, Mrs. Eula Lang, whose giant bouquet was a mixture of red peppers, mint, carrots and cherries, interspersed with sprays of rye and bordered with turnip greens.

The Pioneers have been studying since February the theories that they will put into practice this summer. The main topics chosen include the choice of vegetable products for sale, weighing, advertising, cleaning and grading.

Great interest has been shown in the class by farmers of DeKalb, Cobb, Fulton and Gwinnett, because the course is one greatly needed by rural truckers and will give them a broader understanding of the agencies that help in solving their problems.

The idea of this service was originated by one of the students of the class, Mrs. W. S. McDaniel, market chairman of the DeKalb County Home Demonstration Council.

Graduates of this year's class are Mrs. H. F. Arnold, Mrs. C. M. Mashburn, Mrs. L. A. Richardson and Mrs. J. E. Rosser, all of suburban Atlanta, and Mrs. O. C. Cash, of Decatur; Mrs. E. S. Cowan Jr., Stone Mountain; Mrs. C. A. King, of Stone Mountain; Mrs. H. S. Lisle, of Doraville; Mrs. W. S. McDaniel, of Stone Mountain; Mrs. E. P. Moody, of Markston; Mrs. S. T. Sprinkle, of Chamblee; and Mrs. W. Albert Peavy and Mrs. C. D. Searle, of Stone Mountain.

Hundreds Offer Blood To Keep Child Alive

NEW YORK, May 14.—(P)—Little Gabriella Ferrera, who has spent nearly four of her nine years in hospitals, learned today from doctors that 375 persons in a dozen states have offered to help keep her alive in the six months she has been in New York.

They learned of her case from newspaper stories and offered blood to aid her fight against anemia. She has had 60 transfusions and is getting them now at the rate of two a week.

Talmadge Hits Journal Stand On 4-Year Bill

of editorials have been amiss is due to the fact that some newspapers will try to put across things for their own private gain, or some advertiser's private gain, in nicely worded editorials.

By now, you readers will think, "What is this leading to?"

Here it is: James M. Cox, former Governor of the state of Ohio, former Democratic nominee for President, is advertised as one of the main owners of the Atlanta Journal.

I will write you more about the rumors of this ownership, and who paid for the Atlanta Journal, later on.

Mr. James M. Cox, in a conversation with me just before the close of the general assembly, stated to me in the presence of other citizens of the state, that he was strongly in favor of the four-year term for governor, and was proud that the general assembly has passed this constitutional amendment.

Well, what has developed within the last few days? His paper, the Atlanta Journal, comes out with the most vicious, misleading editorials that I ever read against the four-year term. They even compare it with the carpetbagger days of Bullard.

It is not becoming of James M. Cox's so-called paper to stir up memories of the carpetbagger days in Georgia, even if there was any truth in the similarity of the two issues.

Cox's sympathies were not with the south, they were with the carpetbaggers then, and are with them today.

But, there is no connection between a four-year term for governor and other state house officers for Georgia, and the foreign, mauling Bulloch, first appointed to serve in Georgia as governor.

Was he, too, from Ohio? Where did he run for protection when he left Georgia?

He did not stay in the south. Cox says that his honest sentiments are for a four-year term. He says that he held a four-year term when he was governor of what state?

Ohio, Illinois, or Michigan or Nebraska?

He recognizes the great disruption of any program by constantly keeping the state house officials campaigning.

He realizes that the only correction is to have the terms equally as long as the terms of the county officers—for four years.

Yet, due to some motive of his own, the editorial column of the Journal is misrepresenting the facts, and trying to stir up prejudice in Georgia.

Is it due to the fact that Cox, particularly in his foreign state and with his chain of newspapers, is trying to come back and be the political boss in Georgia.

How did this same Atlanta Journal, one of the chain of Cox's newspapers, describe our general assembly?

They came out and said that: "THE MEMBERS THAT CONSTITUTED THE PRESENT HOUSE AND SENATE OF GEORGIA IS GEORGIA'S DISGRACE."

A general assembly that met and worked hard, refused to raise taxes, cut down the expenses of the state, is Georgia's disgrace in the eyes of the Atlanta Journal, because they would not accept the dictation of the newcomer who wanted to establish himself as political boss in Georgia.

James Cox just can't wait four years to put in his political propaganda. He wants it every two years.

In other words, James M. Cox talks as a private citizen, to the officials of this state and feels one way about a four-year term, and lets his so-called paper, the Atlanta Journal, print false and prejudicial editorials about the four-year term.

But, the editorial page of the Atlanta Journal is not worth anything anyway.

The Atlanta Journal would have more subscribers if they would turn the editorial page into a funny paper.

Mr. James M. Cox has stuck his neck out! He asked for it, and the people of Georgia will show him that they resent the fact that he called the present general assembly "Georgia's disgrace!"

EUGENE TALMADGE.
May 12, 1941.

Following is the Journal editorial of May 7 entitled "An Echo from the Tragic Era!"

The recent general assembly invested the governorship of Georgia with such extraordinary powers that the office can be, at the will of the incumbent, a dictatorship without parallel in the American Union. It is now proposed, in an amendment to the Constitution to be voted on in the June 3 election, to make the term four years.

This amendment is to be voted without divesting the office of the special powers granted for a temporary financial emergency—an emergency which, friends of the amendment declare, was created by the previous executive.

This amendment is to be

Dublin Man Held in Killing Last November

O. E. Underwood Placed in Forsyth Jail in At-taway Death.

O. E. Underwood, 25, of Dublin, was being held in the Forsyth jail yesterday by state patrol authorities, following his arrest in connection with the slaying of Lloyd Attaway, prominent businessman of Dublin, last November.

Patrol Investigator W. C. McLeomore arrested Underwood on charge of suspicion of murder after he had been identified by a Negro as the owner of a gun found beside Attaway's body. Patrol Captain S. W. Roper said.

At the time of his arrest, the accused man was serving a sentence at Tattnell prison for possessing burglar's tools. The Negro identified him in a lineup as the man who had given him $2 to buy the gun with which Attaway was shot, according to Roper.

Attaway was found dead near his car after being reported missing for several days in November. Police believed the motive of his death was robbery.

voted, without the existence of any means for recall of a governor who might become disqualified physically, mentally or morally.

This amendment is to be voted before we know who will be the candidates, what will be their qualifications, who will be the winner and what his character may be.

There will be no session of the general assembly between now and the inauguration of this new governor. There could be no divesting the office of the special and extraordinary powers—until after we already had made the term four years and the man had been elected.

Georgia once had a four-year term for governor. That term was the creation of the carpetbaggers and scalawags, who, fortified by the bayonets of General Meade, laid their schemes for the looting of the state. They drew the Constitution of 1868, with craft and cunning, and they elected Rufus B. Bullock governor. He and his crew, entrenched in the Capitol, filched and stole for three years until Bullock himself fled the justice of an outraged state.

As soon as the white democracy of Georgia could get out from under rule of the bayonet, they threw the four-year term into the garbage heap to which they consigned the other constitutional means by which a dictatorship had been set up.

Is Georgia willing to go back to the plan contrived by and for the carpetbag regime?

We doubt it.

Kill the amendment for the four-year term when you vote on June 3. It is an invitation to tyranny and brigandage.

BIENNIAL VOTE POSSIBLE WITH FOUR-YEAR TERMS

Because of two similar amendments on the June 3 election ballot, it might be possible for the electorate to approve the four-year term for governor but retain the two-year election, which, everybody admits, would be a "freak" result.

Here is the reason:

Amendment No. 1 on the ballot would increase the terms of future governors and other constitutional statehouse officers from two to four years. Amendment No. 2 for these officials.

If the supply of natural rubber is shut off, you'll ride on tires made from oil. For more than a year, the "University of Petroleum" (Shell's $3,500,000 research laboratories) has supplied rubber manufacturers with butadiene—several tons a week—and butadiene, made from petroleum gases, is a key to synthetic rubber.

Yet the lifework of these scientists is making a better Shell Gasoline...

Power that's a research triumph—NEW Solutized SHELL

TWO scientific factors advance the Road Performance Rating (RPR) of the new Shell Gasoline to an all-time high:

- 1 It is refined with the Solutizer Process (originated by Shell's research laboratories, Patent No. 2,149,379). This steps up performance by removing the "pro-knock mercaptans."
- 2 Thermal conversion makes it extra rich in iso-compounds similar to iso-octane—first produced commercially by Shell scientists to give America 100-octane aviation gasoline.

Newly Formed Colonels' Club Awaits Debut

Social, Political Group May Exert Wide Influence in State.

By LUKE GREENE.
A new social and political organization which may exercise considerable influence in state political circles will make its debut next week.

This new organization will be composed of members of Governor Talmadge's staff and will be known as the "Colonels' Club." The initial meeting will be held at 7:30 o'clock next Wednesday night at the Henry Grady hotel.

Heading arrangements for formation of the club is Lieutenant Colonel Jud Roberts, of Atlanta, who has been working on the idea for several weeks.

Unique in Body.
This will make the first time in history that members of the Governor's staff have been welded into a unit.

Although one of the principal purposes of the club will be to promote social functions which will give the colonels an opportunity to wear their military uniforms, it is expected that the political possibilities of the organization will not be overlooked.

Governor Talmadge, it was learned, has okayed the formation of the club along with Brigadier General Sandy Beaver, of Gainesville, who heads the staff, and Adjutant General Sion B. Hawkins.

May See Service Soon.
It was predicted in some quarters that the new organization would be immediately drafted into service to help pass the four-year term constitutional amendment, which will be voted on in the special election of June 2.

In the past the duties of members of the Governor's staff have been rather restricted. Although they are required to purchase uniforms, they have few opportunities to wear them on official occasions.

It is anticipated that the Colonels' Club will increase the official appearances of the colonels and will put them more in the limelight than they have been in past administrations.

CEDARTOWN, Ga., May 14.—Dr. Harmon Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia, will deliver the address at the graduation exercises of the Royston High school Monday, May 19. The commencement sermon will be preached Sunday by the Rev. Louie Huckaby, of Rockmart, and a class of 42 will receive diplomas.

Three Feature Shows Listed On Bills Here

'Wings of the Navy' Plays Return Engagement; 'Great Lie Held'

"The Great American Broadcast" opens today at the Fox, while downtown at the Rialto Jane Withers is getting "Her First Beau" in a film with Jackie Cooper.

"A Woman's Face" begins tomorrow at the Loew's Grand and the Capitol will show "Wings of the Navy" under a new policy of no vaudeville beginning Sunday.

"The Great Lie" today begins a holdover run at the Paramount.

Rialto.

Atlanta's own Jane Withers and Jackie Cooper are co-starred in "Her First Beau," laugh-filled feature comedy, which comes to the Rialto theater today for a week's engagement.

It is the human story of a 15-year-old girl who tries to make of herself a "glamor gal" to catch the eye of a sensationally handsome visiting boy who comes to her town. The tragic result is that she becomes the laughing stock of the gang.

Add to her troubles the fact that the neighbor boy, who has always hitherto been pally, is too engrossed in building an air glider to pay attention to any girl, and you get an idea of the brain-twisting problems that face Jane Withers in this story.

Jackie Cooper, as the neighbor boy, is fine and the balance of the cast is made up of such favorites as Edith Fellows, Josephine Hutchinson, William Tracy, Martha O'Driscoll and Edgar Buchanan.

Loew's.

"The lens like are tough babies!" This has been a vulgar criticism of movie photographers since Hollywood wore knee pants. Which has given rise to the theory that an actress had better watch her step with the shutter boys, lest her countenance be photographed to bad advantage.

As a matter of fact, this theory is not only over-emphasized, but actually false in most instances. The majority of cameramen in Hollywood prefer temperamental glamor girls to less vain, easy-going men stars.

For example, when Robert Planck undertook the task of photographing the new Joan Crawford film, "A Woman's Face," which makes its local debut at Loew's tomorrow, an insurmountable problem presented itself. Miss Crawford is what cameramen call "fool proof." That means that she can be photographed from any angle. Most persons have different profiles — one better than the other. And some stars never allow the bad side to be seen on the screen.

Miss Crawford's role in "A Woman's Face" is that of a girl whose right cheek is disfigured by a brutal scar. For the first time, the actress had a "good" and "bad" side. It had to be decided just how often Miss Crawford could be shown in close-up with a scar — in other words, where "mood" left off, and horror began, and just how far the public could be pressed into accepting the highly photogenic Miss Crawford with a distorted face.

"It is much easier to photograph a person you like rather than one about whom you're indifferent," says Planck. "It is also much easier to photograph a person you know very well. Several times during the filming of 'A Woman's Face' Joan Crawford disagreed with my ideas. Many times I disagreed with hers, but we talked it out until either she was convinced me I was wrong, or I convinced her."

Fox.

Starring Alice Faye, Jack Oakie and John Payne, "The Great American Broadcast" will open today at the Fox theater.

The story concerns the founding of the radio broadcasting network and with the attendant romance between some of the early stars to give the necessary love interest.

Featured in the films are shots of the Willard-Dempsey championship fight, which are used as a background for the first network news event broadcast. Also in the film is Cesar Romero.

Paramount.

"The Great Lie" will move to the Paramount theater today, starring Bette Davis and George Brent and featuring Mary Astor in a comeback.

The story is concerned with a triangle. Both Bette and Mary are in love with Brent and have at times been married to him. There is a child, which is used by both women to get the man and after several dramatic scenes the film ends happily for Bette.

Capitol.

Considered to be one of the finest flying pictures ever made, "Wings of the Navy," which was released three years ago as a super-special by Warner Brothers, will play a return engagement at

Air Defense Sees Three-Fold Stepup

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(P)—A three-fold increase in the regular Army's anti-aircraft defenses within the last year was reported today by the War Department.

In the same period, the number of National Guard anti-aircraft regiments had been more than doubled.

Without detailing present strength, the War Department noted that on the eve of the current efforts to build up national defenses quickly, the regular Army included only six anti-aircraft regiments and the National Guard had but 10, all at reduced strength.

House Coinage Group Reverses Monetary Vote

Roosevelt's Power To Devalue Dollar Kept Intact.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(P)—Heeding appeals by Speaker Rayburn and Secretary Morgenthau, the House Coinage Committee today reversed a previous vote and killed a provision depriving President Roosevelt of his power to devalue the dollar.

Rayburn requested Democratic committee members to turn out en masse at a specially called meeting to reconsider action taken yesterday. The treasury secretary warned that the proposal would "nullify completely the power to devalue the dollar"—a power he said the administration has no present intention of using.

As a result, the amendment of Representative Anderson, Republican, Minnesota, to put a $35-ounce top price on the purchase of foreign gold was knocked out of a bill to extend for two years beyond June 30 the devaluation powers and the treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

Senate Group Approves OPM Priority Setup

Committee Eliminates House Provision for Independent Division

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(P)—Urged to speedy action by defense officials, the Senate Military Committee voted unanimously to give the Office of Production Management undisputed authority to channel the flow of supplies into defense industry and to dictate which products are to be manufactured first.

The committee struck out of a house-approved bill a provision to establish a priorities division independent of the defense agency and operating under the munitions control board.

As approved by the committee, the measure would give legal status to priority orders issued by the Office of Production Management affecting the production and disposition of raw materials and finished products.

The eliminated provision setting up a separate priorities division—a last minute addition by the house—had provoked a storm of protest from administration quarters that it would divide the authority over this important function and disturb the present OPM setup.

One by one, the defense officials—including Knudsen, Edward R. Stettinius Jr., director of priorities; Leon Henderson, price control administrator, and Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war—arose to tell the committee the present system of fixing production priorities was working well and ought not to be disturbed.

At the City Hall

Councilman Paul Butler announced yesterday he will ask council Monday to advise a proposal to create the position of elevator maintenance man for the city and will go along in awarding a contract to the General Elevator Company to maintain city-operated elevators. Butler is author of the measure to provide a maintenance man, but said it might result in establishing a new city department, and that he has reconsidered.

Today is the deadline for payment of 1941 city taxes if citizens

Convoy Now, Winant Urges In London Talk

Wise Use of Navies Will Bring Early Peace, He Says.

LONDON, May 14.—(P)—John G. Winant, the United States ambassador, brought a London audience cheering to its feet today with a "do it now" speech in which he declared the destinies of free people might hinge "on the wise use of the navies of the world."

He spoke before a luncheon meeting of the English-Speaking Union, and he declared that if the United States and Britain would not "put off for tomorrow what can be done today, the victory for freedom will come sooner than we dare hope."

"When clever, cunning dictators are striking with lightning speed at every free nation that dares stand in their way," he said, "the time has come for the democratic nations to prove to the world that while they are free to debate they have the power and the will to act."

Winant referred indirectly to the latest disclosures of British ship losses in the Battle of the Atlantic and said they did not tell the whole story, but served to prove "the protective power of adequate convoys."

The most recent admiralty figures showed that shipping losses in the Atlantic were 301,070 tons in April, the lowest in this area in 11 months.

This news has been treated with reserve by the press and it has stressed that there still is considerable anxiety over Atlantic sinkings.

Winant expressed hope that in debate over losses at sea of goods manufactured in the United States both Britons and Americans "realize that the mere statement of sinkings of ships from America does not tell the whole story."

It only proves, as does the successful transport of troops to the Middle East, the protective power of adequate convoys," he said.

British Report 40-Mile Gain In Salum Area

Hurl Back Italo-Nazi Forces, Continue Ethiopian Cleanup.

CAIRO, Egypt, May 14.—(P)—German-Italian troops have been thrown back 40 miles to positions south and west of Salum and are under the continual harassment of British Imperial forces, the British Middle East command said today.

(The Germans contended they and their Italian allies had advanced 45 miles east of the border village of Salum in a surprise attack begun Monday.)

In addition, the British communiqué said the Imperial garrison besieged at Tobruk, 80 miles within Libya, inflicted "many casualties" and destroyed two German tanks in a "limited offensive operation."

(The Italian high command said Italian troops "bravely repelled" a strong British tank attack at Tobruk, inflicting losses in men and machines on the British.)

Continuing the roundup of Italians in Ethiopia, the British announced capture of 500 prisoners, two artillery batteries, five light tanks and an antitank gun in seizing strongly defended positions in the lake region south of Addis Ababa and said they took more than 100 other prisoners from the rear guard of the Italians retreating along the Neghelli-Dalle road.

Two Imperial forces pressed on toward Amba Alaji, one of the last Italian strong points, northeast of Addis Ababa.

are to take advantage of the two per cent discount allowed for prompt payment, city tax assessors warned yesterday. Cash payments must be made at the city hall before closing time, 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, but letters bearing checks or money orders will be accepted if they are postmarked before midnight tonight.

City council Monday will be asked to assess a special $5 annual license against automobile users living outside the city limits if the cars habitually use city streets. Councilman Paul Butler announced yesterday. He estimates it will raise $500,000 a year.

Faith Without Works

"Faith without works is dead." So wrote the Apostle, James.

The world struggle now raging between the beleaguered forces of democracy and the aggressor, dictator nations of the Axis, is comparable to the ancient warfare between the eternal forces of good and the temporary powers of evil. Faith tells us that good must be eternal and evil cannot but be temporary only.

Democracy is, in its pure essence, the human interpretation of the Gospel of Brotherhood taught by Jesus Christ. Both base their truth upon recognition of the dignity of the individual, regardless of his place in the artificial social structure. Both teach and, by their true disciples, practice the freedom of man.

A large proportion of Americans have known, deep within their consciousness, that the Axis, brought into being by such gangsters as Hitler and Mussolini, is doomed to defeat, eventually. It may take many years. For decades the world may suffer under totalitarian domination. Yet, in the final story, democracy, the government of free men, by free men, for free men, must triumph. Without inner knowledge of this, there could be no faith in anything of the spirit.

Yet, as said by St. James, faith without works is dead. Faith is not enough. We must strive to the utmost to make our faith prove true. A just God placed man upon this earth to work out his own salvation, supported by the guidance of the Divine Power and firm upon the faith which his realization of that power gives to him.

Therefore, it becomes evident that all the faith we may hold in the eternal truth of the democratic ideal is of no use unless we implement that faith with works.

Over in Britain, where force of circumstance compelled rapid awakening from a mistaken trust in the promises of evil men, they have perforce backed their faith with works. The marvelous effort of the British in their war against Nazism is but the combined result of the works of all the people, supporting an unquenchable faith in the justice of their cause.

We of America may find a similar inspiration to works. We may today hold firm the faith, but far too few of us have yet realized that the survival of democratic freedom in this world depends not only on faith but upon the wholehearted work of every one of us.

Before we are worthy of the cause which history and circumstance has given into our hands we must offer our possessions, our work, our lives to that cause.

Each one of us must gladly sacrifice a considerable portion of our substance in taxes for the cost of the war effort we are called upon to make. We must deny ourselves luxuries, even things we have grown accustomed to regard as necessities, so that our factories may devote more and more of their capacity to the creation of the machineries of war. We must squeeze out of our daily expenditures sufficient to buy those bonds which our government offers to us, as a means of helping to finance the war.

Our young men, called, are already cheerfully leaving office and shop and field and work bench and home for life in military training camps. Our mothers are sending their sons away for this training with smiles rooted in pride in the menfolk they have given the nation.

Our workers, those who operate the machines which make the guns and shells and planes and tanks and ships, must forget class greed and group advantage. They must work in the spirit of the forefathers who knew no limit to hours nor questioned the amount of recompense when they hewed their homes out of the American wilderness.

We all must count each day a success which sees something done for the great cause, regardless of return to us as individuals, and we must count that day pitifully lost which sees the cause of freedom forgotten while we strive for personal gain.

Let us take up a notch in the national belt, roll up our sleeves and go to work for one reason alone—that we know without our work, without our complete devotion to the cause, Nazism will triumph and human freedom will be dead upon earth, certainly for years, maybe for centuries.

We have the faith. Let us now, everyone of us, supplement it by works. For it is still true that faith without works is dead.

All our assurances of sympathy and of hope for victory are as nothing if we leave Britain to struggle and to die, alone. But, if we get over there with all our unguessed strength—yes, with our men if necessary—Hitlerism will be crushed and the world's faith in the eternal truth of democracy will again have been justified by works.

A Chicago medical publicist is asked by Worried: "What is the cause of rosy cheeks?" It could be standing on the head, to consider the outlook.

Music Festival

On Friday night, at 8 o'clock, at Grant field, the third annual Greater Atlanta Music Festival will be staged. Last year there were 28,000 people present at this mammoth free show and it is expected that an even greater number will pack into the stands this year.

School bands and school choruses, totaling many hundreds of instrumentalists and vocalists, will fill the air with melody and harmony. There will be vast choruses in which the audience will join and the sight and sound of the massed bands of Atlanta's schools, performing as a single unit, is something never to be forgotten.

In addition to these aural thrills, there will be spectacular stunts to see. There will be massed drills and, beginning at 7:30, half an hour before the main performance, a contest in baton twirling between the drum majors and majorettes of the schools. The prize-winning quartet of twirlers will perform on the main program.

There will be folk dances and intricate dancing and marching performances by 800 children and there will be, as the grand climax, a fireworks show unequalled here before.

Everything is free. The festival is sponsored by The Constitution and a cordial invitation to attend and to enjoy the program is extended to everyone.

A rumor that Matsuoka would visit Roosevelt in Washington is denied in Tokyo. As it was also launched in Tokyo, everything comes out even.

The Lying Morns

There is a calendar upon the wall. It is easy to determine, by consulting its columnar data, the day and the month. According to the calendar the middle of May, 1941, is drawing near. Just a day or so more and this supposedly merry month of early summer will be half gone.

Yet, as each morning comes and Atlanta pokes its collective nose out from under the bed covers, as bare feet shrink from a cold floor and as the soul hesitates before that dash to close the window, there is strong temptation to call the calendar a liar. Either it is wrong or the frigid air of each morning is trying desperately to lie about the season of the year.

They call it, lightly, "blackberry winter," yet it feels more like mid-January. They say, each day, it will be over tomorrow and tailors and dry-cleaners tempt us to turn to lightweight summer wear.

But still we shiver, build fires in the house and look longingly at overcoats hanging in mothproof containers. Durn it, this can't be May!

"From 1890 to 1940, the number of persons per family in the United States declined 23 per cent, representing one full person." Probably father, on bowling night.

A California savant discourses learnedly on "the earth's interior, its nature and composition." Come, come, boys, let's save the surface first.

Georgia Editors Say:

THE PEPPER SPEECH.
(From The Brunswick News.)

Because his utterances in the past have frequently heralded coming administration moves, the words yesterday of Senator Claude Pepper are worthy of careful study and consideration. It was Senator Pepper, it may be recalled, who early began to beat the drums for the lease-lend bill, and he is no stranger to the role of sounder of public sentiment for the President.

To complacent Americans some of the things which the Florida senator had to say may have been shocking, but to thinking Americans his views will coincide largely with their own. One of the great troubles with the United States—and it is a fault of all democracies—is that because of what we call a code of international honor we allow the aggressor nations to get us behind the eight-ball before we do anything to protect ourselves. The senator must have had something of the sort in mind when he advocated the use of the British and American navies to shut up Japan in her Pacific lair he called for the bombing of Tokyo by American bombers.

Unquestionably one reason for the existence of so much muddled thinking in this country is that the people have not been told the entire truth. Washington pussyfoots on the question of conveying supplies to Britain when it is obvious that the Battle of the Atlantic will be lost unless we do. We know that a sizable percentage of the supplies we are sending Britain, thanks to German submarines, never reach the shores of the Isles. But we do not know what the percentage is, and we ought to be told. With the exception of a few individuals, nobody in Washington seems to want to face the facts. The people, themselves, seem far more eager to know the truth and then act accordingly than does the capital.

THE CAPITAL PARADE FAIR ENOUGH

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

DIRECTOR OF SHIPPING WASHINGTON, May 14.—The intense concern over the shipping situation here is indicated by agitation for changes in the management of our own shipping resources. Powerful sponsors have already laid on the President's desk a project for dividing the U. S. Maritime Commission in two. If the project is approved, construction of new ships will continue to be directed by the present commission chairman, Admiral Emory S. Land, while the use of existing shipping will be controlled by a new administrator, as yet unnamed.

The project is no criticism of Admiral Land, but rather a measure of the magnitude of an enormous problem. The task that is intended for him would stagger most men. The shipping situation now calls for hasty revision of the American shipbuilding program to produce not between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 tons over a considerable period, but between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 tons annually.

There is talk of Samuel Zemurray, the picturesque and dynamic head of the United Fruit Company, for the proposed new post of shipping administrator. Whoever the administrator is, he will work jointly with the British, represented here by Sir Arthur Salts. It is to be hoped that Zemurray may be chosen. He would find the existing organization for planning shipping use in the hands of his friend and subordinate in the United Fruit Company, the able H. Harris Robson. He has a fine record as the manager of the largest of the American merchant fleets. And there is danger of an appointee without shipping experience if Zemurray is passed over.

SHUTTLE SERVICES

While the new project is being considered, the Maritime Commission has not waited to prepare American aid at sea. The news has already been given to the world of the 26 freighters that will carry supplies to the British forces fighting in Egypt. But this is only part of the story of the president's announced plan to use nearly 2,000,000 tons of our shipping, taken out of intercoastal service, for getting material across the Atlantic.

The 26 freighters destined for the Red sea are the first of a total fleet of 80. The ships are now being called in from other runs and, if all goes according to schedule, will leave for their destination in groups of five every week for 16 weeks. Their routes have already been laid out, from here around the cape, up to the Red sea ports, and then out again, around India, to Malaysia, where they will pick up rubber and tin for our defense stock-piles, and start again for home. A regular round-the-world shuttle service is to be maintained, in fact. Control headquarters are soon to be established at an unnamed port in Africa to watch over the ships at that end.

The 80 freighters in the Red sea round-the-world shuttle will sail under the American flag, since the combat zone has been changed to allow American ships to enter all ports they will visit. Fifty more freighters will be placed on the transatlantic route to Britain. As this requires entering a combat zone, and as it is desired to keep down changes of registry of American vessels, it is intended to use the recently seized German, Italian and Danish ships of this run. But if the senate effort to keep them out of British hands is successful, the 50 American ships will have to be transferred to British, Panamanian or some other registry. Finally, 25 tankers have already been made available to carry oil to Britain from Venezuela, and another 25 will be turned over shortly.

TWO CHOICES

The program is impressive. Adding the four fast freighters sent to the Mediterranean during the Greek campaign, and the six merchantmen now being converted into small aircraft carriers for conveying in the Atlantic, the total of shipping to be made available to Britain comes to about 1,725,000 tons. But the real question is whether the program is right.

Admiral Land and the staff of the Maritime Commission have strongly contended from the start, in every White House conference on the subject, that releasing merchant ships without providing protection for them was a wasteful policy. As the figures printed in this space some days ago clearly prove, it is worse than wasteful; it is close to suicidal. The combined total of British and American merchant shipping is now just adequate, if properly protected at sea, to maintain the British war effort. If proper protection is not given, shipping totaling one-third of the merchant fleet now supplying Britain will be sunk before the year ends. Replacements by construction take many months. And, although we may ride the British over the hump just ahead of them, we shall find ourselves hopelessly short of shipping when the time for an offensive comes next year.

To this dilemma there are but two solutions. One is brusquely to abandon the present national policy of aiding Britain, accept the prospect of a German-dominated world, and take immediate steps to appease Hitler, trusting in the same hope that inspired Chamberlain, Simon and their friends. The other is to afford the protection now needed by shipping at sea. Taking half-measures, which is simply a way of dragging the mind into forgetfulness of the situation's realities, will only end in disaster.

People Are

The Craziest People.

There is a well-known comedian on the radio whose slogan, or trademark, is the sentence, "Monkeys are the craziest people." I think he's wrong. I think "People are the craziest people."

Just as an illustration, there is some poor, unbalanced soul who is sending out, unsigned, postcards to Atlanta people. They are written by pen and close with the instruction, "Read the 6th Psalm."

Contained in the postcard is a promise of financial reward if the recipient sends out 13 copies to 13 other persons. The specific amount mentioned on the card before me as I write is $16. Why, I have no idea. Anyway, I'm not going to copy the thing 13 times and buy thirteen postcards just to try it out.

Also there is a threat. Says one woman made fun of the card and her husband died on August 13. Too bad. But I'm afraid my wife will have to take that risk. Not that I'm making fun of the card, I'm just voicing pity for the poor, deluded souls who take such things seriously.

I've received a couple of the things. Dudley Glass, if I remember correctly, mentioned receiving one some weeks ago. And an Atlanta minister sent me one, received by his wife, in the morning's mail. He writes: "I thought it might be worthy of publicity for no doubt other women are receiving one of the same. . . it might make some woman nervous. . . It shows that not all the fools are dead yet."

So, hereby I'm advising all who receive such things to forget about them at once. And, to the crazy person, or persons, who send them out, don't send any more to me. You're just wasting postage, that's all.

Somebody

Understood.

Some ten days or so ago this column told of the need for three new cabins at the summer camp maintained by Atlanta Mission, which is headed by the Rev. Felton Williams, for the boys and girls from the poorest, most wretched and poverty-stricken sections of Atlanta.

Each of those cabins costs $250 for material and building. And the column wondered from whence would come the required $750. There was really no doubt but that it would come. For Dr. Williams operates his magnificent work among the poorest, on faith. When something is needed, badly, he simply asks for it, through prayer, and it goes serenely on, confident it will come. And that faith is so invariably justified that, where he and his work are

Lewis

Phoned

NEW YORK, May 14. In yesterday's essay on the fallacy of Senator Robert M. La Follette I made a slight mistake in saying that John L. Lewis, at the time of the steel strike at Johnstown, Pa., wired President Roosevelt warning him of an invasion of the town by 40,000 of his mine workers and attempting to disown responsibility for violence that might occur.

Lewis did not wire President Roosevelt to that effect, but telephoned Frances Perkins, the secretary of labor, and Governor Davey, of Ohio, that "somewhere in this land there should be authority to prevent the contemplated butchery of our people in these mills tomorrow." He was speaking of the steel strike plants in Ohio, where his CIO pickets were trying to prevent other men from going to work, and what he plainly meant was that there would be butchery if the workers tried to go to their jobs. He wanted the mills closed by the powers of government where the pickets and the Communist revolutionaries had failed to achieve that effect for him.

However, Senator La Follette's report on the situation in Johnstown employs quotation marks around the "rumored invasion" of the troubled city by Lewis' coal miners, and what I want to show is that this was not an imaginary danger but an actual one.

Russell Porter, the New York Times reporter on the scene in Johnstown, wrote that "Mr. Fagan (the president of District 2 of the mine workers) said 40,000 was a conservative estimate of the miners who would come from the western and central Pennsylvania coal fields to attend a mass meeting of the CIO steel strikers tomorrow," at which Philip Murray, the chairman of the steel workers' organizing committee, would be the principal speaker.

Obligingly

Closed Mills

In this threat of some financial aid for such small community effort, also would be a help. If the savings can be translated into that, I can do without my peach tag.

The "invasion" was not a mere "rumor" but an actual plan to march 40,000 massed partisans into a scene of contention already marked by some bloodshed, and Lewis was permitted to have his face and escape moral responsibility for anything that might have happened when the Governor surrendered to his union.

The men who had been working and who apparently wanted to continue to work obviously were not planning to attack 40,000 coal miners, plus the steel strikers who were out of the plants, and the ideological desperadoes who had sneaked into the situation with or without the welcome and indorsement of the CIO.

If civil war had broken out, followed, as in Herrin, by massacre, it would have been a mistake to seek the aggressor on the side of the non-strikers. As to whether the CIO would have dared to assume the responsibility for this meeting in these circumstances, we can't ever know. Governor Earle cracked down on the victim of the implied menace and the situation dissolved.

In the

Herrin Case

After the massacre Lewis decried the bloodshed, denounced his mine workers had been "infested with thousands of detectives and secret service operatives whose employment by the coal companies depends on their ability to provoke violence and disturb public tranquility." This may have been true, but the community was intensely partisan to Lewis, and if Lewis had legal evidence to support his charge it is strange that not a single murderer of the 26 men ever was punished.

Of course, this is old material, but it all bears on my contention that the "rumored invasion" of Johnstown by 40,000 men was no myth and, in congressional documents, deserves presentation without the discrediting suggestion of quotation marks.

Word Stories

By W. Worthington Wells

Members of opposing faiths or political parties may from a temporary COALITION for some specific purpose.

COALITION

Coalition is a noun pronounced the third syllable (li). The first co-a-LI-tion with the accent on syllable (co) is pronounced with a long (o) like that in coal. The (a) is modified and the (li) sounds more like (lish).

Coalitions are not confined to congressional groups. A coalition, or combination of groups, may be formed within labor organizations, political parties, or in any group where differences develop. Such coalitions or alliances are often formed temporarily to achieve a specific purpose. A coalition of rotten political organization in women voters can clean up the this country—if they stick together.

Builds Theaters.

Mexico City will have 10 new theaters for folkloric plays. The city has started on four playhouses and six more will be built later this year. Each will accommodate 1,000 patrons and all will be equipped with the best stage, player and patron facilities. The city government launched the project to aid unemployed theatrical people.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE PEACH TAG I see by the Kentucky papers that Mr. Ivan Jett, head of the marketing division of the department of agriculture in "Old Kaintuck," is at the mourner's bench with the same chant heard from all southern states.

Mr. Jett is moaning that Kentuckians buy blue grass seed from other states, uproot apple trees and buy Washington apples, go to Georgia for peaches and to Tennessee for strawberries and sorghum. He likewise urges the co-operative raising and marketing of standardized products, of which last year's sorghum is cited as an example. The co-operative brand, systematically handled, brought 75 cents a gallon, while farmers, acting on their individual initiative, sold theirs for 40 cents.

The esteemed Courier-Journal, in commenting on this, and on Governor Talmadge's threat to remove the peach from the Georgia automobile tag, wonders if the replica of a pancake liberally soured in Kentucky sorghum on Kentucky license plates would have encouraged the sale of sorghum. The Courier-Journal doubts it and wishes Ivan Jett had some money to spend on state supervision of standards and grading and on encouragement of home consumption of home products.

I find myself very sad indeed over the prospects of losing the peach from the license plate and returning to the old-style parallelism. It is not that we Georgians put the peach there to sell peaches. We sell more peaches than any other state. We like it there because it provides an artistic license plate. The artistic sense of the Georgians, who appreciate beauty, is soothed and furthered by the handsome license plate. So many artists have painted sections of Tobacco Road and our sharecropper cabins, we have become a bit sensitive. Thousands who never before appreciated art smile happily at our peach plate. Ours is the only state where one may become a patron of the arts by buying an automobile license plate.

It is for this reason, the artistic reason, that I am sorry to see the peach tag go.

BUT, NEVERTHELESS— Still, and all, if there were some way to take the estimated $100,000 which, it is reported, will be saved, and apply it on farm markets, I will quell my sadness.

If the State Agricultural Department can take the $100,000 and set up a system of grades and market aids and promote home consumption of our goods, I will worry along with a non-artistic tag. The farmer is not so lost as some would have us believe. He has never been given a market for graded goods. He has not been given—until recent times—any instruction from experiment stations. Most of all—those who have attempted graded products have not been protected by the State Bureau of Markets. His graded goods were, too often, pushed off the markets by low-priced culls and ungraded produce.

Georgia hasn't even an official state brand with strict requirements for all those who would sell under that brand.

Georgia farmers need to be shown. The experiment station does a good job. But if there was money enough for more farmers to be shown things by the state experiment station—that would help.

Instructions for community co-operative effort, and perhaps some financial aid for such small community effort, also would be a help.

If the savings can be translated into that, I can do without my peach tag.

THE PEACH GROWERS

The peach growers might be willing to see it go if the state can assist them on having Georgia consume a few more thousand bushels of peaches.

Meanwhile the chain stores are doing the best job for the farmer. They are providing increased markets and they are, by campaigns, encouraging the production of Georgia vegetables and Georgia beef, pork and lamb.

Like Mr. Jett, of Kentucky, we may mourn that we go to Washington for apples; to Tennessee for strawberries, and to California, Texas and Arizona for vegetables, which we could ourselves produce. A few days ago I talked with a gentleman from the Atlantic Commission house who is in direct charge of the spending of $140,000,000 in the southeastern states for purchase of fresh fruits and vegetables. Florida gets the largest percentage because of her great citrus market. But this gentleman pointed out that along the coastal section of Georgia could be grown most of the vegetables now purchased in Texas, Arizona, and California. Spinach, carrots and iceberg lettuce can be produced in greater quantities. There is one successful iceberg lettuce center in Georgia. That is on Butler Island, near Darien. There is a small farm of 125 acres on the South Carolina coast which has had its third successful year with lettuce. That is all in the south.

The grocery stores, the chains and the independents organized in co-operatives, can furnish the market if the state can begin to produce. The state will begin as soon as it is shown the market is there.

I will sacrifice the picture of the peach without a qualm if we can spend an extra $100,000 to help the farmers get a toe-hold in the market which exists.

A Prayer for Leaders Who Can Guide Us Through the Dark

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

God of our fathers, who made and preserved us as a nation, once more in a time of dreadful peril, threatened as never before in our history, we appeal to Thee for guidance and for help.

God give us men to lead us, for we are lost and without hope unless we have noble, far-seeing and courageous leadership. Restore our President's courage, if the awful strain of responsibility has made him afraid. Give him the moral courage to defy all the powers of evil and boldly declare and defend the principles of right and decency. Give him confidence in himself and in the character of our people, that he may no longer hesitate or wait for assurance of popular approval. Restore his faith in his own cause, and inspire him to speak boldly and clearly to rekindle the hope and confidence of distraught and anxious people who ask only to be led.

The powers of darkness, which would destroy our liberties and bring back the ancient evils of tyranny, have arrogant and outspoken leaders, and many of our people are turning to them because no other voice speaks with such assurance.

Give understanding to all of us and preserve our faith in the eternal triumph of right.

Give us strong and noble men in congress. Give new character and understanding and a new sense of responsibility to the blind and little men who are there—the men who plan for our people a crushing burden of taxation in the name of defense, and yet continue to purchase the favor of the people by giving billions to those who once needed relief and to farmers who once needed help.

We know that self-seeking and ignoble men, meanly scheming to hold their place or gain new power, cannot save our nation even if they would. And we pray that all of them may be given a vision and comprehension that will enable them to see our peril and prove themselves worthy of their high place while there is yet time.

God give us men able and worthy to lead us, and give us grace and courage to follow the way of right until Thy will is done.

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

Blessings on thee, little man, soon you'll have a coat of tan, as you ride the road that reaches mountain peaks or sandy beaches. Soon the summer days will tarry, couples will divorce or marry, some will hear Dan Cupid calling, others hark to infant's squalling. Schools will close and students, happy, will go home to Mom and Pappy and, with their well-known insouciance, soon become a daily nuisance.

Soon the pavement will be melting under Sol's incessant melting and the old refrigerator (hotter than a baked potato) will be running like the devil, sending "juice" bills to new levels.

Though there are sufficient reasons to be thankful for all seasons, we are prone to keep complaining of the seasons, waded or waning, we are grouchy, grumpy, bitter (that's the nature of the critter) if it can't give us, wet us, freeze us out, b'golly, it can't please us!

Can't Take It.

Atlanta's climate is justly famous throughout the world. There is no city which can offer more infinite variety.

But sometimes I think the congress or the President or Gene Talmadge should do something about adjusting the temperature to the calendar. Perhaps "synchronizing" is the word.

My house is a big old house with high ceilings and super-ventilation and you can't heat her up with an open-face gas gadget or an electric glow worm. What she needs is a furnace fire and plenty of it.

And here it is, the middle of May, and my house is so darn cold in the mornings I hate to crawl out of bed.

The mistress of the manor having sought the milder climate of Milwaukee, I have discharged our large staff of servants—butter, footman, upstairs maid, downstairs maid, second housemaid, scullery assistant, silver polisher and two valets. I got all those out of a book, so if my terms are inaccurate blame Agatha Christie, not me.

It is my custom, being caught in the coils of fatal habit, to arise in the morning at 7 a. m. or thereabout, wrap myself in a bathrobe, procure the morning newspaper, whose name I shall not mention, the pint of milk, brew myself a cup of French drip coffee and spend a couple of hours of relaxation after the troublous night of nine hours in bed.

But how can I relax when the house feels like the cooling room of a morgue?

Build a fire? No. Are you a sissy?

What use to build a fire when you're leaving home before it gets going?

So what? Shiver! That's the only answer I know. I've shivered off three pounds in the last week. If this weather continues until the Fourth of July I can qualify as the best living skeleton in a carnival show.

That Super-Highway.

About paving that last stretch of Atlanta-Marietta highway, which will open a fine new route to Chicago and points west, let's quote Otis Brumby, of the Cobb County Times.

"If it isn't one thing it's another. Now Mike Carroll, the contractor who is to pave the new Atlanta highway, is moving his equipment down to Macon on a defense job. According to a story in the Atlanta newspapers' last week actual paving was to start this past Monday and the highway department announced they had assigned an inspector to the job to report last Monday morning.

"I haven't been able to find out much about the sudden move on the part of the contractor. According to information from the State Highway Department and also the Governor's office, it appears the materials for the job have been delayed and will not arrive for two or three weeks. In the meantime, Mr. Carroll has secured a rush contract that calls for day and night work at Macon. Reports have it that he will be back here by June 1 to go ahead with the local job.

"From the Governor's office my information is that Mr. Carroll has made bond for his contract and that the road positively will be paved and that the project is not abandoned. Well—I have heard that before. From what I gather there seems to be some hitch about getting the money to pay for the work as Mr. Carroll wants it and it would appear he is making use of his equipment to pick up a little ready money while the state is getting into position to keep payment coming on the Marietta job.

"Anyway—I still ain't seen no paving."

'Confucius Say'

Whatever became of—forgive me for digging up old bones—"Confucius say?"

I've been knocking about considerably, as the saying is, and I haven't heard anybody quote Mr. Confucius in the last three months.

What's the answer. Is Mr. Confucius dead or has he just quit writing wise thoughts or did the copyright laws cut him off?

And while I'm about it, I might venture to wonder what happened to that popular pastime of saying "Knock, knock," for no especial reason, and then springing a gag. Usually terrible.

Life goes on, whether we like it or not. And has its compensations. If you can live through measles and mumps and get your teeth fixed old age may bring its comforts, if not joys.

Atlanta Tent 21 Going to Show Club Meeting

William K. Jenkins Leads Group to Atlantic City Convention.

By LEE ROGERS.

ABOARD THE VARIETY SPECIAL (Northbound), May 14—Rolling through the night on a special train which is gathering a lot of key stops, seventy-nine members of the Atlanta Tent 21, Variety Clubs of America, were headed for Atlantic City tonight and the seventh annual convention of the show business' great charity organization.

Chief Barker William K. Jenkins is leading the delegation, and Assistant Barker Harry Ballance is keeping the group in herd for he has arranged all the transportation and housing problems and is the man with the tickets. The club is paying the railroad fare of all its members who would go.

The Atlanta tent is out to win the attendance cup which they failed by one delegate to capture last year in Dallas. To insure this, Ballance and Jenkins have announced that no refund on the railroad ticket will be given to any member who fails to show up for the Friday morning business meeting of the convention at the Traymore hotel in Atlantic City.

That partly explains the reason for the early beginning of gay festivities on the train before the train even left the Terminal station. Riley Davis led the "parade," as last year, being about the first to change to comfortable clothes of which he wouldn't mind the knees getting dirty.

Paul Wilson and E. E. Whitaker were the early work horses, doing the last-minute checking for their bosses, Ballance and Jenkins, respectively.

Missing on this convention special are all the members of the tent from the Republic Pictures office in Atlanta—A. C. Bromberg, Perry Spencer, Henry Glover and others. They have a big convention of Republic officials in Chicago that comes timed badly for the Variety convention.

The special is due to arrive in Atlantic City at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. The Atlanta tent will establish headquarters in the Traymore hotel and will remain until Sunday, arriving back in Atlanta Monday.

Some of the members already are talking of staying a few extra days and journeying to New York to renew acquaintances with movie officials there who might not make the Variety convention.

Also making the trip are three of the Negro waiters from the Variety clubs, just so the barkers won't get slow service.

Woodward To View G. M. A. Dress Drill

Admiral Clark Howell Woodward, retired, U. S. N., of Atlanta, will review the full dress parade of the battalion of the Georgia Military Academy, Colonel W. R. Brewster, head of the school, announced yesterday.

The parade will be at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the school parade grounds. Preceding the military review, Colonel Don Scott, professor of military science, will give a half hour demonstration of jumping and horsemanship. Horses from Fort McPherson will be used. Colonel Scott is a member of the polo team of the fort.

ASKS LOCAL CHURCHES TO SERVE VERY POOR

Editor Constitution: I have just read the interesting "Silhouettes" of May 1, "Newsroom Comment." No doubt many people have read this statement and called it "an exaggeration" or something to that effect. The reporter, however, is no doubt near the truth. The reporter is quoted as saying "The thing that a lot of people won't believe . . . but one of the handicaps of the section is the presence in the vicinity of a number of emotion-stirring, drag-em-in, stir-em-up gospel tabernacles or tents."

I believe he is correct. I agree with him further that the good, sane, religious people of this city should try to do something about it. There should be a real, sane, evangelistic campaign conducted by the churches of the entire city and lasting through the summer . . . or, better than that, throughout the year, which seeks to save the girls and young people of the poor of these rundown sections in downtown Atlanta for decent living and good citizenship.

Now, the purpose of this letter is to make to the churches of the city a proposition which I believe will meet with the approval of the reporter. It so happens that, as director of Atlanta's Mission, Inc., I am operating a community center in the very heart of what is known as the most poverty-ridden section of downtown Atlanta. Near our community center are large vacant lots upon which might be erected a tabernacle or tent and will co-operate with us, Atlanta's Mission will sponsor the campaign, Raymond de C. O'Neil, dean of St. Philip's Cathedral, is chairman of our board of directors, composed of representative men and women of all denominations. I believe the dean would fall in line with my suggestion.

Of course, it would be expected that the participating churches would each assume responsibility for one week or more of evangelistic effort among the poor of downtown Atlanta. Atlanta's Mission would provide the grounds, be responsible for the tabernacle or tent and assign the participating churches from week to week. Such an attempt on the part of the churches would, in my judgment, be a far more effective campaign against vice and crime than a campaign of law enforcement. Such an effort would be fundamentally Christian . . . seeking to save the lost . . . to rescue to decency and good citizenship the young girls who are victims rather than to imprison and punish them. We here at Atlanta's Mission on Pulliam street are ready to go when the Christian people of the churches give the word.

STRIKE NOT CERTAIN AFTER STRIKE BALLOT

Editor, Constitution: On the question of "standard" pay and working conditions between the A. B. & C. railroad and its employees who are members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen there appeared in your issue of May 10 a statement by union representatives and a reply to it by B. L. Bugg, president of the railroad.

As a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and an employee in yard service of this company for several years I wish to express, personally, that the strike ballot taken by the employes is merely another legal step in their effort to reach a peaceful settlement of the issue and does not necessarily mean that a strike will be called. The employees do not want to strike or to interfere in any way with the orderly operation of traffic on this property. They do not wish to inconvenience the public or the company by an interruption in the service. On the contrary they have, for long years, been faithful and loyal and are, today, as efficient as like employees on any railroad in the country. Yet over a long period of years they have rendered their services for a remuneration equal, approximately, to only about two-thirds of that paid employees on other Class A railroads for the same kind of work.

Our organizations have kept every avenue open leading to a peaceful and satisfactory termination of what we believe to be a fair and just request for equal consideration accorded our brother members on other Class A roads. We shall continue this policy of fair play. Only after all other means to continue peaceful operation have been exhausted will the strike be put into effect. S. W. LINEBAUGH JR., Manchester, Ga.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

Beau Hudson took me down to Columbus last week for an engagement in connection with their annual Youth Day, and an engagement at Fort Benning. And before I have a word about our delightful trip back, let me say that you have to go to Fort Benning to have any idea of that vast military establishment. It is big from every viewpoint. The post area covers more than 100,000 acres. The buildings are spacious and very impressive. There isn't a shabby building at Fort Benning, though we did notice a rather shabby sort of thing that encircles one of the big hospital buildings, intended as a walkway, they told us. My guess is that when the boss architects see that runway, it will either come down or will be built right.

We drove along beautiful highways through the camps that make up the tremendous training fields of the fort. All sorts of modern military activities may be seen at Fort Benning. We were specially impressed by the parachute towers. Heavy tank maneuvers were also in evidence. The highway that leads into the fort gives you the impression that you are entering a great park. We saw thousands of soldiers, all appearing in top condition and ready for any emergency. I repeat, you have to go to Fort Benning if you want any idea of the greatness of the place.

What I started in to say was a word about our trip home Thursday. We left Columbus at 9 o'clock and got to Atlanta at 4 o'clock. We took it easy, all the way—a mighty good way to see this wonderful Georgia land. We stopped to see the Jordan High school in Columbus—one of the outstanding vocational high schools in the United States. We enjoyed talking with a group of students, each of them ready to give a good report of his purposes today and tomorrow.

We stopped at Warm Springs to see the United States fish hatchery. Mr. Ballance took us through the entrancing tour of beautiful pools in which thousands of little fish are cared for in every scientific fashion. The breeding fish are very beautiful—bass and bream mostly. We saw several schools of fish, numbering thousands in each instance. We could have stayed there all day, but we decided to move along, and across the road we visited Mr. and Mrs. Harry, very interesting people. Mrs. Harry was Miss Bulloch before marrying the Presbyterian minister from North Carolina. Mr. Harry is pastor, farmer and mayor of Warm Springs. He is a very busy and a very happy person.

He asked us to come back for a day of fishing at his private lake. At Greenville, we saw the same men playing chess with whom we had talked on our way down. At Newnan, we stopped for lunch and talked with many fine people. We stopped at Fairburn for a visit with my old friend Marshall, who operates a nursery. I met Mr. Marshall the first time on the day I went to Columbus to conduct the funeral for the beloved Lewis A. Henderson. We stopped at Candler airport and watched some of the big ships lift into the blue. It was a good day.

Here's what Atlanta users are saying about GAS REFRIGERATION

Mrs. Jack W. Slaton.

In a talk over WSB recently here's what Mrs. Jack W. Slaton, of 524 West Ontario Avenue, S. W., said of her experience with gas refrigeration:

"My first gas refrigerator was handed down to me by my husband's family. They had used it six years—I used it five years, myself—a total of eleven years that it was in use before I traded it in on a larger gas refrigerator. I wouldn't have traded it in then, except that my family outgrew the box. We've never had a nickel's worth of upkeep on either of these refrigerators. From my experience with these two gas refrigerators, I wouldn't change to any other kind."

Army Tests New Observation Plane

WASHINGTON, May 14.—A new observation plane, designed for scouting and maintaining liaison with ground troops, is being tested by the Army Air Corps. The War Department said today that the plane, designated the O-52, was a high wing, strut-braced monoplane with retractable landing gear and was manufactured by the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, Buffalo, N. Y. It was described as slightly smaller than the air corps' present O-47B, but comparable to it in performance. The new plane carries a crew of two and is powered by a Pratt & Whitney radial air-cooled engine. It has a short range radio set and camera fittings and can be equipped with machineguns.

Charles Coates Loses Appeal For New Trial

Faces Resentance to Electric Chair in Officer's Death.

Charles Coates, convicted slayer of Highway Patrolman Fred Black Jr., of Macon, last night faced resentment to the electric chair after the state supreme court overruled his plea for a new trial. Meanwhile, the state had fulfilled its obligations to Dolph Ames, Petros, Tenn., guard, who captured Coates, by forwarding him a check for $500. The state and five north Georgia counties offered the $1,000 reward for Coates' apprehension when he was leading pursuers a merry chase through the mountains of north Georgia and Tennessee.

Judge John C. Mitchell, of the Cherokee circuit, indicated Ames might have to resort to mandamus action to collect $100 from each of three counties which promised to participate in the reward but have not posted their shares.

Two Shares Posted. Sheriff J. P. Moreland, of Catoosa county, said Catoosa and Whitfield counties had posted $100 each. Obligated for the other $300 are Walker, Chattooga and Gordon counties.

In holding that Coates must die in the electric chair for his crime, the supreme court ruled the trial judge was authorized to charge the jury on the law of confession on the basis of the following testimony by Coates:

"I don't know why I did it. People do squirrely things sometimes. I went up on the hill and wondered why I did it and thought of taking my own life." Coates, who is now in Fulton county jail, repudiated the alleged confession at the trial and said the trooper was killed by another man for whom he was transporting $1,000 worth of narcotics.

Slain December 20. The slaying took place December 20, 1940, on Highway 41, near Ringgold. Black stopped Coates to caution him about zigzag driving. When he was asked to produce his driver's license, Coates whipped out a pistol and shot Trooper Black. After an exchange of shots with Black's trooper companion, Coates escaped into the woods, leaving his bride in the automobile.

He was trailed over the mountains of Georgia and Tennessee for several days before he was captured. His feet were frozen so badly surgeons had to amputate his toes.

Judge Mitchell originally sentenced Coates to die on March 7. He will now have to be resentenced and another electrocution date will be set.

Dorothy Thompson Says:

Soul of Civilization Blasted

In order to have resonance in the world today, words and deeds have to be in some proportion to the events. They have to be somewhat adequate. Mr. Hoover's speech was nowhere near the events. It seemed to me to have been uttered from some other time, from some other planet, and this in spite of several references to facing "hard facts." It seemed to me that hard facts were nowhere in Mr. Hoover's picture.

It happened that Mr. Hoover's speech coincided with news of the bombing of Westminster Abbey, the British museum, and the house of commons. The three objectives represent the very heart of western civilization. No three structures in the world more completely embody the dignity of man: the Abbey; the museum; the commons.

World's Soul at Stake. The Christian church and tomb of heroes, sages, statesmen, poets. The world's greatest library; receptacle of the wisdom of ages; record of the timeless thought of man; fountain to which the thinkers of all countries, in all languages, have repaired, open to all, at the service of all; the commons, symbol of the longest most uninterrupted, and, on the whole, most dignified and enlightened experience of popular government that the world has ever known.

When the Nazis burned the Reichstag the world should have leapt to arms. For in all the wilderness there is always a certain pattern, ominous, symbolical, portentous. When they set fire to synagogues they made a little arson on the abodes of the human soul. Soon, and inevitably, it would be the Abbey. When they burnt the books in the public square—just a few years ago—soon, soon the world should have known, it would be the museum. The Abbey, the commons, the museum are not just buildings. They are history—the history of the human soul and the human mind, struggling upward, ever upward, toward light, toward freedom, toward decency, toward knowledge, toward grandeur.

Symbols of Humanity. They are immense symbols of humanity's piety, faith and hope. They are beyond the present and beyond England. They belong to mankind—to the past—to the future.

They are the link between what man, for thousands of years, has considered good and worthy to be praised and the better and truer tomorrow which he must build. These are what are falling, falling, falling in the moonlight night, or falling in the blazing light of the fires of hell. Falling is the fate of the human race, falling are the monuments to the great dead that remind us constantly of the sacrament of life, falling is the careful structure of beauty and of wisdom, falling are the parliaments of man.

Falling. Falling is western civilization. A world is passing away, in wantonness o'erthrown. Wanton. Senseless. Insane. Idiotic. Evil. Even trivial.

Childish Assault. Yes, even trivial. Trivial this childish, barbarian, crazy assault upon the human race. A few boys with some machines and explosives press buttons, and where are you, Shakespeare, and where are you, Blake, and where are you, oh, long, deep, memorable history of man?

This was to stop the destroyers of civilization in their tracks. To defend the abbey, the museum, and the commons. To see to it that though they lie in rubble, and the very dead are exploded out of their tombs into the light of arson brighter than day, and the records of a thousand searching brains are mingled with the ashes of a surprised child's hair, and the representatives of the people must meet under the sky of a roofless hall—to see to it that nevertheless:

The abbey stands; the museum lives; the commons meet. Because the human will cannot be broken. It is better to say nothing at all, perhaps. To stand still in deepest awe. To look . . . to gaze hard, not to avert the eyes—not for a moment—to stare, to think, to realize.

Stark Realization. To realize a world without the abbey, the museum, the commons. A world without aspiration, love, reverence, wisdom, freedom. A world of barracks, and prisons, and factories, and slaves, where wisdom is the Voelkischer Beobachter, and the people an incorporated shrieking hyena applauding itself with monotonous animallike cries.

It is not an adequate comment that Britain cannot defeat the Nazis. If not, what then? It is not an adequate comment that we must send more and more materials to Britain to help her defeat the Nazis, but we must not see to it that the goods get there, because getting them there will

Vichy-Berlin Pact Seen as U. S. Warning

Approval Interpreted as Gesture Against Intervention.

VICHY, France, May 14.—(P)—The French government approved today the Hitler-Darlan collaboration terms in a formal gesture considered by diplomatic circles to be more than anything else a warning to the United States to stay out of the war.

French informants who usually know what they are talking about acknowledged that the negotiations conducted by Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan and the German Fuehrer transcend the economic and enter the political field. Thus diplomatists in this capital of unoccupied France regarded today's approval of the negotiations by Chief of State Petain's cabinet as a means of presenting America with a fait accompli of collaboration and thus a measure intended to deter Americans from plunging into the European conflict.

The semi-official French Paris Mondial agency, formerly Havas, dotted the i's and crossed the t's of the announcement with these remarks:

Find France's Place.

"At the present hour, after the Balkan campaign which eliminated the presence of the British troops from the European continent, Gibraltar excepted, everything indicates that Germany is thinking more and more of organization of the continent. The problem is to find out what place is to be reserved for France in this new organization."

As a matter fact the negotiations are not believed to be finished at all. France now has contributed a communiqué which appears to be a warning to the United States; in exchange she is reported to be scheduled to receive varied advantages, including return of a number of prisoners who are primarily farm workers and a shift in the demarcation line between unoccupied and occupied France which will put Paris in the unoccupied zone, leaving the Germans actually occupying only about one-fifth of France.

Four-Hour Conference.

But what else France is giving Germany besides full economic and perhaps full political co-operation has not yet been indicated. Tonight it was learned that Hitler and Darlan conferred for four hours at Berchtesgaden, last weekend, and French sources described the meeting as cordial.

One direct result of these negotiations was the report that 50,000 pictures of Darlan are now being distributed through the unoccupied zone. They will be sold to individuals and for posting in stores, as previously has been done with portraits of Marshal Petain.

The first pictures went on sale last night a few minutes after Darlan returned from the Hitler conference.

mean that our ships will be shot at.

It is not an adequate comment that we can do more for Britain by letting the goods go to the bottom of the ocean than by risking our skins.

Must Risk Our Skins.

That is sophistical argument. It is not candid, and it is not true. There is a touch-and-go chance that we may save enough civilization to build another world on, but no chance at all unless we risk our skins.

And our lives, fortunes, and sacred honor.

And our savings, wages, and standard of living.

The cross, the book, the gavel. Aspiration, inspiration, order. In one word: Humanity.

You are worried, Mr. Hoover, about post-war bankruptcy. You mean our savings will be gone.

And if Hitler wins? What bankruptcy will that be? What are savings? Are they in the bank?

Or in the abbey, the museum, and the commons.

'Terrifying' War Decision Faces Nation, Ramspeck Warns Here

America Passing Through 'Most Critical Period,' Congressman Tells Postmasters at State Convention; Urges Serious Study.

The United States is passing through its "most critical period" and is faced with "a terrifying decision soon" in regard to the war, Representative Ramspeck, of the fifth Georgia district, told Georgia postmasters in convention here yesterday.

"We may have to make a decision which will mean death to many of our fellow citizens," he said. "I am not here to say which step is right or wrong, but I do think that all sides of the question should be considered carefully, and that the final choice should come direct from the people."

Ramspeck discussed recent congressional action in regard to national defense and aid to Britain. He said he was fully in favor of aiding Britain, "because it is the sensible and sane way to keep Hitler away from our hemisphere."

"But we haven't a two-ocean navy yet," he said, "and it would take two or three years to get one and for us to be really prepared to defend both the Atlantic and the Pacific."

In Georgia and the south, he said, 95 per cent "or better" of the people are in sympathy with Roosevelt's foreign policy. But in other sections "there is a pretty even division."

This division of opinion applies to the subject of convoys, he said, adding:

"I don't know if conveying is necessary or not. Conveying means war. The President said that conveying would mean shooting and shooting means war, and that is right. One of the big questions yet to be settled."

Woman Seeks $1,200 in Plane Wreck Here

Claims Liner Ruined Property on Farm in Crash.

Alleging that the Eastern Air Liner which crashed on her property near Morrow, Ga., was equipped with a faulty altimeter, Mrs. Corinne Nolan yesterday filed suit in Fulton civil court for $1,200 damages to 75 pine trees and a wheat field.

The plane crashed February 25, killing five passengers and three crew members. Among the injured was Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, World War flying ace and president of the defending Eastern Air Lines.

Charging negligence, Mrs. Nolan said that the plane flew so low it clipped off the top of the pine trees on her property and then landed on her property instead of the airport.

As a result of the crash, she claims, the pines were ruined, a wheat and oats field was trampled over and an orchard of fruit trees badly damaged.

Postmasters Of State Win Chief's Praise

Superintendent W. J. Dixon Addresses Georgia Convention.

High praise for the postmasters of Georgia was given here yesterday by W. J. Dixon, of Washington, superintendent of the division of postmasters of the Federal Postal Service.

Speaking at the 1941 convention of the Georgia branch of the National League of District Postmasters, in the Henry Grady hotel, Dixon said the post offices of Georgia are rated well above most of the states for efficiency in operation.

"The state as a whole ranks 14th in the nation in efficiency," said Dixon. "That is a fine record, but one it is our duty to improve. Our goal is still better service and greater efficiency, and we will not be content until more progress is made."

Broken down into classes, the state ranked as follows: First class, 11th; second class, fifth; third class, 22nd, and fourth class, 22nd.

The convention opened with an address of welcome by Mayor LeCraw. Others speakers yesterday were Lon Livingston, Atlanta postmaster; Homer C. Parker, state controller general; Paul L. Miles, of Metter; Congressman Robert Ramspeck, who spoke on the imminence of war.

Mrs. L. Bertie Rushing, of Glenville, president, in her report, stated "offices are now better equipped, civil service for postmasters is now a reality and a retirement plan is in effect."

She has served eight years as president, but announced she would resign the office as her duties as national president of the National League of District Postmasters makes it impossible for her to carry on the Georgia work.

Sightseeing trips, a tea at the Governor's mansion, and a banquet last night rounded out the day. Officers will be elected today.

Senate Vote Camp To Give On Farm Bill No-Gun Salute Spurs Prices For Talmadge

Soaring Commodities Hit 4-Year High in Some Cases.

CHICAGO, May 14.—(P)—Soaring farm commodity prices that reached four-year peaks in some cases today greeted senate approval of legislation to raise American agriculture's income through establishment of higher government loan rates.

Wheat shot up almost 5 cents a bushel to above a dollar—highest price posted here since last May before the market collapsed with German invasion of western Europe. Wheat has risen 19 to 22 cents since March 1.

Cotton rose more than a dollar a bale in New York to above 13 cents a pound, highest in more than four years.

Corn, climbed more than a cent to near 75 cents, hogs a dime to around $9 per hundredweight, soybeans almost 4 cents to as high as $1.37 a bushel and lard 15 to 20 cents to around $10 per hundredweight or better. Corn, soybeans and lard prices were the highest since 1937. Hogs were the highest since the spring of 1938.

On the produce exchange butter and egg futures rose about 1-2 cent per pound and a dozen to new highs for the past several years while spot butter advanced to 35 1-4 for extras and eggs to above 22 cents a dozen, highest in more than five months.

Fall of Dictators Seen by Baptist

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 14.—(P)—Downfall of the dictator governments and establishment of the United States as the world's "arsenal of religious thought" were foreseen today by Dr. W. W. Hamilton, of New Orleans, in his presidential address to the Southern Baptist Convention.

He spoke to more than 6,000 delegates representing the nation's 5,100,000 southern Baptists.

"The rulers of today shall pass away, even as others who have stalked across the pages of history in past ages," said Dr. Hamilton. "While systematic efforts are being made to eradicate religion in the totalitarian countries," he continued, "the faith of the people of this country has grown stronger and more intense. There is a great upsurge in the faith of the American people directly traceable to the war, and it is up to this country to preserve and extend it."

$1,000,000 Available For Work at Airport

Early start on a huge runway extension program at the municipal airport involving the expenditure of nearly $1,000,000 was predicted yesterday by Jack Gray, manager, following announcement in Washington that federal allocations are available.

Robert L. McDougall, deputy WPA administrator, announced from Washington Wednesday that all obstacles have been removed and that work can be begun within a few days.

Governor Will Understand Camp Wheeler's Plight—No Guns.

He even might not be honored with four ruffles and four flourishes by the drum and bugle corps.

"He will get an honor guard, and I'm sure he'll understand and be satisfied," Lieutenant Colonel P. S. Moses, president of the Georgia department, Reserve Officers' Association, said yesterday in mapping plans for the state R. O. A. convention which Talmadge has been invited to open.

What the Governor is asked to "understand" and "be satisfied with" is the fact that there are no guns at the replacement center, and Colonel Moses doubts if drummers and buglers can be on hand. Camp Wheeler is one of the four infantry replacement centers in the country and members of the Georgia R. O. A. will hold their fifteenth annual convention there as guests of Brigadier General John H. Hester, commanding general.

In addition to General Hester, the top ranking officers who will be on hand include Major General Walter Harris, retired; Major General Blanton Winship, former Governor of Puerto Rico, and Major General Henry D. Russell; Colonels E. S. Bres, former national president; E. W. Smith, national vice president; C. C. Early, Fonville McWhorter, Royce McClelland, T. H. McHatten, and Lieutenant Colonel J. F. Muldrow. The last meeting of the Atlanta R. O. A. of this session will be a barbecue dinner at 6:30 o'clock, May 21, in the Tap Room of the Atlantic Brewery. Reservations must be made prior to noon Monday at the Reserve Officers' headquarters, 322 New Post Office building, by telephone, Walnut 8924, or by mail.

Druggist Is Fined For Narcotic Sales

R. M. Daniel, a Lee street druggist, was fined $100 yesterday in Fulton county criminal court by Judge John S. McClelland for violation of the state dangerous drug act.

Daniel pleaded guilty to the charge, brought by W. D. McGee, of the federal narcotic office. He was accused of selling a patented narcotic sedative without a physician's prescription.

Judge McClelland suspended a 12 months' jail sentence upon payment of the fine.

Jury Tampering Probe Launched

The Fulton grand jury yesterday began a surprise investigation into complaints from certain jurors in the Eidson and Scarborough flooding trials that they had been "approached" by friends of the defendants.

More than 50 witnesses were summoned, but only a few went before the grand jury. Several persons were called to testify on tampering with the two juries.

Shelby Officer Finds Method in Methodism

CAMP SHELBY, Miss., May 14.—(P)—An officer was addressing a group of Negro soldiers here today. "How many Methodists are here?" he asked. Not a hand was raised. "Come, come," said the officer. "How many of you are Methodists? Why, I am a Methodist myself." Every hand shot into the air.

Last week in Washington, Attorney General Robert Jackson said Princess Hohenlohe had given the government "some very interesting information" and that "we feel better" natured about her.

The Ancient Craftsmanship

By RAIMUNDO DE OVIES

MET HENRY SCHWEITZER in Dallas, Texas, a few days ago. Mr. Schweitzer is a silversmith of Baltimore and he was demonstrating his skill in the Texas city. His work was a revelation because I had assumed that it was a lost art and that silverware of even the better sort is now made by machinery. I was mistaken, indeed; because, while he was working, he was telling me that he had been making articles from sheets of silver and then proceeded to "chase" them before my eyes. He took a circular, thin platter of silver, some 20 or 30 inches in diameter and corrugated it into a fluted pattern around the edges. He then placed this on a curved block and beat it into shape with various mallets, from the inside, until it assumed the general contour of a coffee pot. The "chase" is in getting uniform thickness throughout. The handle and spout were added later.

Much of his work is in repousse, flowers and other designs in high relief. This also is accomplished by beating the design into the article from the reverse or inner side. Now is when Mr. Schweitzer's numerous tools come into play and the raised design is chased, or delicately carved and given "texture." The firm in which he piles his craft has been in continuous business for 125 years, and it has a collection of early pieces which is the envy of antique lovers everywhere. Money couldn't buy these examples of silversmith's art, but they will some day go into a national museum. We spent together what for me was a thrilling and illuminating hour. At the close he excused himself for a few minutes and went to his hotel room. He came back with a small article of silver, beautifully executed and gave it to me. His eyes twinkled when I protested that I was a stranger and that I could not expect any gift, especially one so lovely. "It's all right," he said, "I wanted to talk about my work and you were interested and understanding. Please accept it." So I did. It will help me to remember both the craftsmanship and the craftsman.

British Reveal Hitler's Aide Sought Duke

ton Mearns, a village barely eight miles from Glasgow, his first words were to ask the way to Dungavel, the press association said.

Duke in RAF.
Had Hess landed in the Dungavel grounds, his mission still would have failed, for the Duke was not at home.

The castle has been used since October, 1939, as a military convalescent home.

The Duke, who was on duty as an RAF squadron leader, saw Hess in the hospital, then returned to his squadron while other Britons continued the questioning of their prize prisoner.

Hess and the Duke had met several times before the war in connection with flying and skiing activities in which they both were interested and at the 1936 Olympic games in Germany, when they both were officials.

The Duke of Hamilton is premier peer of Scotland, with lands and titles dating back to 1339. His estate is one of the largest in the entire country.

Not only the Duke himself, but his youngest brother, Lord David Douglas-Hamilton, and David's wife, the former Prunella Stack, have traveled extensively in Germany.

Lady Douglas-Hamilton, as head of the Women's League of Health and Beauty, took a team of her physical culturists to Germany's "Strength Through Joy" convention at Hamburg in 1938, the year she was married.

Lord David once worked as a coal miner in Germany's Ruhr district, and also worked in two German labor camps. Like his brother, he is in the RAF.

High Nazi sources declared last night that "Deputy Fuehrer Rudolf Hess was a political incompetent" who flew to Britain under the spell of a Messiah complex, believing he could end the war and fly home to Germany in about two days.

Berlin will disavow any peace proposals he might make in England, it was asserted, but on the other hand the Nazis denied that he carried any documents likely to disclose German state or military secrets and insisted he was not a traitor.

That he was no turncoat was indicated by his action in permitting his Messerschmitt 110 fighter plane to crash while he parachuted to earth in Scotland at dusk Saturday, the Nazis said. Had he landed the plane, it might have given the English some Messerschmitt construction details, it was asserted there.

"Not Initiated."
"Hess had the fixed idea he was a sort of Messiah who, by a spectacular individual gesture, could bring about a termination of hostilities," the Nazi spokesman said, asserting that the peace complex and other details of the quixotic scheme were disclosed in "rather copious documents which Hess left behind" when he flew from Augsburg.

"Naturally Rudolf Hess was not initiated in plans of the Reich's supreme military leadership, which—as is known—are available to a circle of only a very few persons," it was asserted.

"On the other hand, he knew enough that he was convinced the German-English war would be carried out to its last consequence, regardless of what support England should yet receive, and that it must end not only with the defeat but the destruction of England."

Knew Point of View.
Thus, it was said, Hess wanted to see the Duke of Hamilton and other personalities to acquaint them with "the real situation."

The spokesman said Hess "considered discussion with Churchill useless because he (Hess) had expressly observed that he had no wish to confer with the English prime minister under any circumstances."

Regardless of whether this is the case, dispatches from London said Hess was going to have an interview with Churchill, and soon.

The British radio meanwhile pulled out the stops in a 10-day schedule of broadcasts designed to keep the Nazi leaders in an agony of doubt and fear as to what their erstwhile colleague was doing and saying in his hidden refuge.

Hess, declared an official of the British Broadcasting Corporation in a remark characteristic of this opening series, already was speaking and writing "words which may make the German high command sweat."

Said a broadcast directed to Germany:

"Nothing precise will be known until Mr. Churchill divulges as much as he thinks fit to divulge of what Rudolf Hess has been reading and writing in the military hospital where he lies."

Tied in was the disclosure that Prime Minister Churchill would see Hess—Nazi No. 2 until his abandonment of his homeland—at a time and place not disclosed and that in this meeting it was hoped that vital Nazi secrets would be let fall.

The British radio in a broadcast heard in New York by CBS said Hess told the farm people he had brought "valuable information which would be of great use to the British in overthrowing the tyranny that now prevails in the Reich."

"He said that he was intending to take this information to the Duke of Hamilton. Hess told the farm people of the hardships now being experienced in Germany and the great distress which now prevailed among the people there; of the bombing of the Royal Air Force and the suffering of the population from the general effects of the war."

Remaining with him was Ivone Kirkpatrick, of the British foreign office—and it was said, too, that in the party that accompanied him from a Glasgow hospital to his present retreat were high officers of military intelligence.

Meanwhile, on and on went the BBC, teasing Nazi curiosity, raising suspicion within Germany: "Hess wasn't a mere politician, but the most intimate friend of the Fuehrer, who knows him in his intimate mood."

"What facts did he know which led him to betray the friendship of a lifetime and endanger the structure of the Reich which he helped to build?"

Hess' broken ankle was reported on the mend.

"He's cranky about what he eats," said a member of the hospital staff. "Guess he has a reason at that: he craves his flight with only compressed food tablets."

TEACHERS GET BONUS.

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 14.—(AP) Teachers in the Columbus public schools will receive an extra one-half month's pay June 1. The school board voted to "bonus," amounting to $17,000, with the view that it would help the instructors take care of their summer vacation expenses.

Leaders Admit Act of Hitler's Aide Shocking

Hitler, or from party experts assigned by him to the task, the district leaders get definite instructions on what they shall tell the people. These then return quickly to their district headquarters and pass the word along to their subordinates, each of whom is in charge of a city or section of a city.

Under these officials come still more subordinates, each responsible for developing or reporting sentiment in his particular section. But even he is relatively a "big shot," in charge of perhaps 100,000 persons. Under him come "circle" leaders who are assigned to a particular number of blocks in a city or half a village. Then come the actual block leaders, whose job it is to complete the task of conveying Hitler's own personal reactions to every person in his block.

Yesterday's meeting with Hitler set that machinery in motion. Sources here said that while ordinarily it might take a week to two weeks to get the message distributed, this time the case is more urgent. In the first place, a war is in progress. In the second place, the flight of Hess came so suddenly that the people had not the barest intimation that the slightest defection was possible—particularly in the case of this perhaps most persistently loyal of Hitler's followers.

Newspapers largely limited themselves to the barest report that Hess fled to England. But foreign correspondents were given the additional assurance that something would be happening very soon which would blot out the Hess episode.

Authorized sources quickly disclaimed any intention of predicting that this might be a military action, but said that it would be something tremendous. Such an event could be expected to assist the party organization in quieting the reaction of the general public to the effect of Hess' flight.

Girl Should Forget Boy Who Leaves Her

Dear Dixie:
I am just desperate, and I am at my wits-end trying to figure out something. This man I have been going with for some time and whom I loved very sincerely, has suddenly faded out of the picture. Why do people change like that?

By Dixie George.

Why do people whom you pin your faith upon turn out that way? Do you think it was something I have done and should I call him to find out? I have looked back over our acquaintance and for the life of me I cannot remember anything that I have done which would make him change. Anything you could tell me would be appreciated.

G. L. C.
Dear G. L. C.:
There is no accounting for why people change. There is nothing you or anybody else can do about it. This man just did not have the qualities of sincerity. If he is the type of person who can just walk out on a girl without the slightest twinge of conscience, I know you haven't done anything, and I wouldn't let that worry me if I were you. The man just did not care to continue going with you and therefore stopped. If he wants to come back he will, and I would advise you not to make any attempt to communicate with him. After all, you should have some pride. Let him do the calling, and if he does not, just forget him. It is rather hard to take, I know, because losing faith in someone is rather bitter and disappointing. It affects the emotions, and causes one to adopt a defensive attitude toward everybody, which is very bad. The only thing to do when you lose faith in someone is to be glad it was the other person and not you who failed.

DIXIE HELPS SOLVE WEDDING PROBLEMS

Dear Dixie:

I am 18, and the boy I have been going with has asked me to marry him. I feel that we were both meant for each other, although we do not plan to marry for some time. Since I have never gone through this before, and would like to marry at my home, I would like to have some information on the subject. Can you help me or tell me where to get a book?

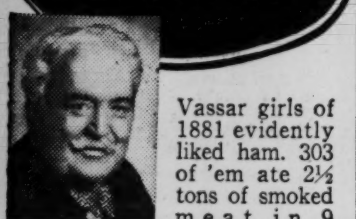

WORRIED MIND.

Dear Worried Mind:

A home wedding is usually small, with only members of the immediate family present. It may be formal or informal and may be as elaborate as you wish it to be. The size does determine the formality of the affair. Decorations should be considered, the minister chosen and the musical program selected. If a reception is planned to follow the ceremony, one should discuss the menu with a caterer. There are a number of booklets on planning weddings which may be obtained at book stores, or the library or through The Constitution's Home Service Bureau. Write to this paper for the latter, enclosing 10 cents.

(An Atlanta woman conducts this column of friendly counsel and will be glad to help the readers of The Constitution with their problems. Send your letters and she will give you advice in this column. Your name will be held in confidence. Write Dixie George, in care of The Constitution.)

WILSON'S Weekly RECIPES

Vassar girls of 1881 evidently liked ham. 303 of 'em ate 2 1/2 tons of smoked meat in 9 months. Well, if they could have eaten Wilson's Certified Tender Made Ham, it would have been 5 tons. This ham that has taken America by storm comes ready to eat, or you can heat it in five minutes per pound! And what a ham! Always juicy. Always tender, and economical, too.

George Rector
Food Consultant, Wilson & Co.

Woman: "You say Tender Made gives me 25% more ham to serve?"
Rector: "Yes. There's no wasteful Oven shrinkage."

The longer meat stays in the oven, the more it shrinks. Ordinary ham can shrink up to 25%. Tender Made Ham heats in only 5 minutes per pound. This prevents costly oven shrinkage. It pays to buy Wilson's Tender Made Ham.

Easiest of Hams to Fix

Allow a Wilson's Tender Made Ham to come to room temperature (68° to 70° F.). Place in an open roaster in a 350° F. oven. Heat for five minutes per pound. Take ham from oven. Carefully remove the skin. Score the fat into large diamonds with a sharp knife. Decorate with canned pineapple slices cut in halves and maraschino cherries. Pour over it a syrup made by cooking 1 1/2 cups pineapple juice together with 1/2 cup sugar. Return the ham to a hot oven (400° F.) for 20 minutes and baste with the syrup.

HOW TO SELECT FRANKFURTERS

First look for the yellow tag that reads Wilson's Certified Quality. Frankfurters bearing this tag are in natural casings, thus making them so tender, so juicy and flavorful that they belong on everyone's dinner table. To cook, rub each frankfurter with Clear Brook Butter and broil or bake in a 425° F. oven. Don't prick them or you will lose that delicious goodness.

Vitamins at Their Best

Wilson's Certified Braunschweiger is rich in vitamins A, B, and G. It is high in proteins, iron, and copper. So serve it often. For a different sandwich, mash the braunschweiger and combine it with diced celery, chopped hard-cooked eggs, lemon juice, a few drops of Worcestershire sauce, and Wilson's Mayonnaise. Fill toasted rolls with this mixture and serve with slices of tomato.

Remember, Only Wilson & Co. Makes Tender Made Ham.

The Wilson Label protects your table.

MY DAY: Washington Routine Starts Again

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday.—Yesterday evening, in New York City, Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach called for Mrs. Morgenthau and me to go to the Women's City Club dinner. It was the 25th anniversary of the founding of the club. I was sorry that my old friend, Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, in whose house the idea of a woman's city club was first discussed, could not be present. But Dr. Josephine Baker, who was among the founders, presided with grace and efficiency.

I did not join the club until my husband returned to New York City in 1920 from Washington, but I have had the good fortune to know many of the original founders. I remember with affection and admiration Miss Mary Garrett Hay's leadership in the first days when I became active on the board. I was sorry too that Mrs. Edward Dreier, who was president during most of the years when I worked there, was away and could not be present.

I think the women can be proud of the record of their accomplishments. But, above everything else, it seems to me that they should be encouraged by the fact that they have been able to induce a number of women to take an active part on committees, which are really informing themselves on municipal government.

I was particularly pleased last night to note the youth of many of the chairmen of the committees, who stood up to take their bows. I have always felt that when young people come into an organization, that organization is on a firm foundation and will continue to grow.

The platform for next year was read by the club's new president, Miss Bartlett. Then Mr. Newbold Morris, who frequently pinch-hits very successfully for the busy and overburdened mayor of New York City, discussed this platform and gave the point of view of a city official on some of the things which the women suggested.

His talk was excellent and the audience listened attentively. It was a tribute to him and also to the educational work done by the Women's City Club in the past few years.

Mr. Morgenthau and I flew to Washington this morning. It was certainly grand to return and be met by so many smiling faces, to find the President feeling much better, and our son, Elliott, and his wife, Ruth, still here. In these times, when our children scatter to parts unknown, under orders, even a day or two, or a few hours here and there, make a difference in life. The President started in soon after my arrival with a stream of visitors and I went directly to my press conference.

In a few minutes I shall go to lunch with the ladies of the senate. So, you see, the Washington routine begins again with great rapidity.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Daughter: "Mother, there's something I want to talk over with you while we are doing the dishes tonight."
Mother: "You boys go on for a walk with dad."
Daughter (to herself): "That means she's going to talk to me about something."

There is a greater freedom of expression when time alone with a child just happens than when it is too obviously planned for.

Bette Davis Has Difficulty Looking Over 25 Years

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, May 14.—"Does Bette Davis look like the mother of an 18-year-old girl?" Director William Wyler asks me on "The Little Foxes" set. He points to the screen's first lady, now wearing a 1900 hair-do—high at back and masses of curls in front—a wasp waist and toe-length skirt. Despite the corset, designed for the express purpose of widening the Davis hip-line, Bette manages to look not a day older than 25.

Perhaps Bette should have played the daughter role and let someone else take on the mother. She wanted to play both parts, but finally settled for the meatier mama character (played by Talulah Bankhead on the stage). Bette, instead of being pleased when I tell her how young she looks, almost snaps back, "I bet you'll look old on the screen!"

The 18-year-old daughter is played by 21-year-old Teresa Wright, who looks 18. The three years that have elapsed since Teresa, small, brown-eyed brunet, was graduated from high school in New Jersey have—in her words—"been easy, lucky years. Right away I got into a stock company in Provincetown, where every day bus loads of tourists would pass and say, 'This is where Bette Davis began.' Then, I got a good part in 'Life With Father' (which is where Goldwyn saw and signed her). And now, this picture with Bette Davis!"

Teresa's role will be bigger in the movie than in the stage version. She gets a beau—Richard Carlson—in addition to Dan Duray, who is repeating for the movie his weakling characterization. Miss Wright has a real-life beau in New York. "We made an agreement before I left," says Teresa, "that he mustn't believe everything he reads about my doings in Hollywood." An item recently appeared in print that Miss Wright and Writer Niven Busch were going places together. "I haven't had time to go places even if I wanted to," protests the lady.

"But there was one story I thought even sillier," she continues. "I read where I'd been bitten by a big insect. You'd think they'd invent something better than that." I would think so.

Tyrone Power is 10 pounds heavier, and Betty Grable is 10 pounds lighter for their chore in "A Yank in the A. R. F." And they both look better for the exchange. The Grable torso diminished after a seige of wisdom-tooth trouble. Tyrone's extra poundage is the result of a milk and cream diet. It makes him look older. "Which is why I did it," Ty tells me. "I'm so weary of hearing 'he was too young for the part.'"

Miss Grable, who has given up night-clubbing with George Raft for the duration of her role, plays an American chorus girl stranded in London at the beginning of the air blitz. During this period Betty Graduation time brings dress problems for schoolgirls. Dresses are needed for graduation exercises as well as for parties. Shown above is one which will serve for either or both purposes. It combines white moire taffeta and net. The molded bodice zips up the front with shirred fullness in the bust, while the soft, full net skirt gives a fresh youthfulness. Miss Rebecca Kellan models the dress. If you want to find out where you can get it and the price (which will please you), just call Winifred Ware at Walnut 6565.

X-Ray or Surgery Removes Moles

By Dr. William Brady.

Neither moles (pigmented birthmarks, sometimes containing coarse hairs, sometimes warty, sometimes containing masses of fat) nor port wine stains (birthmarks consisting of dilated blood vessels) can be removed or safely treated except by the physician and surgeon.

Freezing with carbon dioxide snow is the method preferred by some physicians for removing moles, patches and freckles. Of course this, too, would be dangerous in the hands of an operator without surgical training.

Surgical diathermy, electro-decatharion or electrocoagulation, gives the most satisfactory results in many cases of freckles, moles, patches, moles or port wine marks. Moles having coarse hairs may be most successfully treated with X-rays alone or, if more than dime-size, by surgical excision, by plastic operation, perhaps skin-grafting, to fill the defect or X-ray treatment later to favor smooth scar. Electrolysis is sometimes satisfactory for small moles in which hairs grow, both for destroying the hairs and destroying the hypertrophied tissue by criss-cross insertions of the needle.

In the treatment of port wine stains (vascular birthmarks) the younger the infant or child the better the final cosmetic result will be. X-rays, radium, electrolysis, surgical diathermy (electro-decatharion, electro-coagulation), freezing with carbon dioxide snow (dry ice), or in exceptional cases, complete surgical excision and skin grafting to cover the defect, may be the method of choice—it is for the doctor to determine the best method according to the circumstances. I repeat, none of these methods is reasonably safe except in the hands of the trained physician or surgeon.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM AKERS JR.

Miss Oliver Weds Mr. Akers At Brilliant Church Rites

Speaking their vows in the ethereal glow of candlelight, Miss Georgia Briggs Oliver and William Akers Jr. were married last evening at a brilliant ceremony solemnized at 8 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church. A gathering of fashionable society witnessed the nuptials and attended the elaborate reception at which the bride paraded, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Oliver, entertained later at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Dr. William V. Gardner officiated and Dr. Charles Sheldon presented a program of music. Beautifying the church were stately white columns topped with Grecian urns holding Easter lilies, the altar having been banked with cydonium ferns and palms. The first 10 pews were reserved for the immediate families, and were designated by bouquets of white flowers.

William Akers, father of the groom, was best man, and groomsmen included Herbert Reynolds Jr., James Branch Jr., Stiles Burroughs Jr., Gordon Jones, Henry Berry, of Rome, and Mitchell King Jr. Ushers were Bona Allen Jr., of Buford; Harry Pritchett, Cobb Dunaway, Norris Broyles, Charles Gardner, Forrest Adair Jr., Willis M. Everett Jr. and George M. Brown III.

Reception Follows. Miss Betty Ann Bird, of San Antonio, Texas, formerly of this city, was maid of honor. She wore a model of moonlight maize organza, the stemlike bodice having been marked by shirring and clasped at the waist by a matching taffeta girdle. The unusual skirt fell in petal tiers outlined with wide flounces, and she carried yellow roses, blue delphinium and yellow daisies tied with delphinium blue organza ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Miss Peggy Fountain, of New York; Misses Eloise Ellis, Lillian Roberts, Elsie Dunnick, Georgia Adams, Jane Hailey, Betty Jean Shelton, of Reading, Pa., and Mrs. Stiles Burroughs Jr. They were gownned alike in models of moonlight maize organza styled like that of Miss Bird, and their bouquets were similar to hers. Entering with her father, John Edwin Oliver, the bride's youthful beauty was accentuated by her dainty wedding gown of foam white organza. The low waistline was marked by insets of exquisite Chantilly lace, the lace being repeated at the duchesse throatline and on the brief puffed sleeves. The skirt billowed over a double taffeta slip to from a long cloud-like train, and her veil fell from a Chantilly lace coronet trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of purple orchids encircled by valley lilies.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception at the Piedmont Driving Club, assembling several hundred friends and relatives of the prominent bridal pair.

Pastel Motif. The bride and groom, their parents, and members of their wedding party received guests standing at the right of the Georgian ballroom before a background of palms and cydonium ferns. At either end of the receiving line was placed a white column topped with a Grecian urn filled with sprays of pastel blossoms.

Mrs. Oliver chose for her daughter's wedding a gown of shell pink marquisette combined with matching lace and accented by a shoulder spray of purple orchids. Mrs. Akers was becomingly attired in dawn pink chiffon and lace, and her shoulder spray was of pink orchids.

Palms and Grecian urns of pastel flowers beautified the entrance hall of the club, and corners of the ballroom were banked with woodwardia ferns and palms. Buffet tables were decorated at intervals with mammoth crystal bowls filled with pastel flowers, and five branched silver candelabra held glowing tapers. Punch tables were garlanded with smilax, bowls of the sparkling beverage having been encircled with colorful spring flowers. A popular orchestra played throughout the party, a miniature white picket fence surrounding the orchestra platform.

Bride's Table. The bride's table was distinctive both for its beauty and its sophistication. Shaped like a ring, the hollow center featured a sunken garden from which arose a huge bubbling champagne glass. Joanna Hill roses and blue delphinium formed the floral decorations, and spirals of smilax formed a tracery on the white satin cloth. The frosted wedding cake was posed on a plateau of Joanna Hill roses, valley lilies and delphinium.

The fireplace in the private dining room, where the table was placed, was banked with ferns and palms were massed in the corners of the room. Miss Mary Campbell Everett kept the bride's book.

Mr. Akers and his bride left for Southern Pines, N. C., to reside, the latter wearing a brown and white printed dress with a brown coat and brown and white accessories. Her flowers were orchids.

Christening Service Repeats Theme of Parents' Wedding

By SALLY FORTH.

..... INTIMATE FRIENDS of John and Chavigny McDonald assembled early last evening at Shangri-La, the picturesque McDonald home on Forrest Lake drive, for the celebration of two auspicious occasions. Not only did the date mark the sixteenth wedding anniversary of the hosts, but the real reason for the gathering was the christening of their adorable infant daughter, Chavigny Clarke McDonald.

Mrs. L. Travis Brannon acted as godmother and Henry Grady Sr. served as godfather for the baby at the christening rites, at which a close friend of the family, Dr. R. L. Russell, of Griffin, officiated.

An interesting sentimental feature of the occasion was the beautiful improvised altar erected at one end of the living room, an exact duplicate, even to flowers and candelabra, of the one before which John and Chavigny spoke their marriage vows.

And pinned to the baby's left shoulder was a tiny corsage of sweetheart roses, showered with narrow satin streamers and valley lilies, a miniature of the bouquet carried by her mother as a bride.

Sentiment was also attached to the handsome silver bowl used to hold the christening water, for it is a part of an heirloom service belonging to the family of the baby's late maternal grandfather.

The tiny future belle presented a fascinating picture in her exquisite christening robe of sheer imported batiste. The long dress was fashioned with a hand-embroidered front panel, edged with five rows of narrow lace, matching lace being used to trim the edge of the skirt, which fell from the yoke in narrow pleats.

Colored motion pictures were taken during the service as a lasting remembrance of this important occasion, and will be saved as a gift for little Chavigny when she is old enough to appreciate their sentimental value.

The house was decorated throughout with roses and other garden flowers for the occasion, the lace-covered table in the dining room having for its central arrangement a large silver bowl filled with white garden flowers and fern, carrying out the bridal motif of white and green.

Only the members of the families and a very few close friends were present to witness the christening and to extend felicitations to their hosts.

..... STAG house parties are "tops" with the masculine element when they want to really relax, revert to old clothes and generally enjoy themselves indulging in the pastimes of the "good old days when we were boys."

It was with all this in mind that six close friends departed by train Tuesday evening for St. Simons Island, where they will spend the next few days at James L. Dickey's beach cottage.

Accompanying Mr. Dickey were Albert Thornton, Robert F. Maddox, Will Kiser, Ben Noble Sr. and Tom Daniel Sr., all of whom will assume the role of Izak Walton during their stay. For they plan to spend each day fishing and doubtless will have plenty of "tall tales" with which to regale their stay-at-home friends when they return to the city.

Incidentally, Mrs. Dickey has been spending the past week at the island, but returned home yesterday, leaving the cottage free for the occupancy of "the boys."

..... TO LOUISE HANCOCK (MRS. WILLIAM D.) OWENS and Ellen Fleming (Mrs. Henry) Bowden goes credit for the novel and attractive decorations which featured the luncheon given Tuesday by the Druid Hills Garden Club for the judges of its highly creditable rose show. Arranged on three sides of a hollow square in the Biltmore dining room, the table featured a garden theme in red and white.

Beginning at the open side of the square, Louise, who was luncheon chairman, and Ellen, her co-chairman, cleverly worked out a scheme which featured the cultivation of the queen of flowers. Along the inside of the table they placed a shiny new garden rake to signify the planting preparation; the slender handle entwined with sprays of white running roses. Next there was a hoe and a familiar box of Vigoro, resting on a mound of roses, to signify the cultivation. Then there was a spray and pruning shears, which were also rose-entwined. At the corners where the table turned across the end of the room at right angles were graceful baskets filled with freshly cut red roses as indication of the result of cultivation. And last, but not least, was the exquisite arrangement of gorgeous red roses—the completed product—which centered the speakers' table.

Marking the guests' places were miniature white flower pots holding perfect red rosebuds. Each bud was caught with a small wooden tag—the kind used to identify rose bushes in the garden—with the guests' names inscribed in red. The club president, Mrs. Joe

Women Democrats To Give Luncheon And Elect Officers

A luncheon takes place on Saturday at the Henry Grady hotel when members of the Women's Division, Fulton County Democrats, gather at 1 o'clock for election of officers and reports from the recent Regional Conference of the Democratic women which was held recently in Nashville.

Mrs. Byron Matthews, chairman of political education, will conduct her final quiz, and a report will be made by Mrs. James G. Barnes on the recent cancer drive. Mrs. Eugene Talmadge will be honor guest, and others will be the Georgia women who attended the Regional Conference. The representatives will give reports on the national defense sessions.

The retiring president, Mrs. Max E. Land, has served in the capacity since the Women's Division, Fulton County Democrats, was organized four years ago. At the recent state convention of the Women's Division, Democratic Party of Georgia, of which the Fulton County Division is a unit, Mrs. Land was elected president of the State Division.

The decorating committee for the luncheon will be composed of Miss Dorothy Banks, Miss Georgia Pruitt and Mrs. William England, and music will be in charge of Mrs. W. A. Bacchus. The hospitality committee will include Mesdames John M. Cooper, W. F. Dykes, Chauncey Smith, S. R. Dull and Miss Abbie Donaldson. Reservations for the luncheon may be made by calling Mrs. Odie Poundstone, Hemlock 1220-W, or Mrs. James G. Barnes, Raymond 7128.

Read, looking lovely in a sky-blue dress and hat, made a graceful speech of welcome, and Mrs. Carl Lewis introduced the judges in an impromptu talk made all the more delightful by her fascinating French accent.

..... ON MAY 27 at the New York University, the directors of the Hall of Fame will unveil the bust of Stephen Collins Foster.

Among those specially invited to participate in the exercises are Atlanta's Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Haden, without whom no gathering in the name of Stephen Foster would be complete. You see, Mr. Haden has always been such an admirer of the beloved song writer that in 1928 he placed a granite shaft to his memory at the headwaters of the Suwanee river at Fargo in Georgia. And when Foster Hall was dedicated on the Pittsburgh University campus that institution placed on its walls a portrait of Mr. Haden, which the university had previously had painted to be installed along with a group of other admirers of the great composer who had taken part in honoring his memory.

Every five years, it seems, the 110 electors of the Hall of Fame, composed mainly of college presidents and literary men, select names from the illustrious dead to be memorialized. Under the rules it requires that two-thirds of all the votes are necessary to a choice. Out of the many names voted on in the fall of 1940, the only one receiving the necessary majority was Stephen Foster, author of "Swanee River" and many other famous folk songs.

The speakers at the program of exercises will include Josiah K. Lilly, widely known industrialist and philanthropist; John Tasker Howard, Foster's biographer, and Mrs. Jessie Welch Rose, Mr. Foster's granddaughter.

Mr. Lilly donated to the Pittsburgh University a magnificent building known as Foster Hall, in which he placed an added donation of 200 original manuscripts of Mr. Foster's songs, and many other memorials of the world-famed composer.

..... THE MANY little children who benefit from the splendid work done by members of the Vacant Chair Circle will be aided again by proceeds from the annual bridge party and luncheon sponsored by the group tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Edward Cerf on Springdale road.

Composing membership of this circle is a group of prominent women whose splendid work for children is well known in charitable circles. One of their projects is the memorial hospital on Hightower road known as "The Isolation Hospital," which was built and is maintained by members of the circle.

The group also furnishes milk for pre-natal care of dependent mothers, and through the city health department the women donate to the Christmas funds for children, and the Community Chest, and respond to the needs of small children whenever and whenever necessary.

Members of the circle are: Mrs. James Stanley Moore, chairman; Mrs. Winfield Payne Jones, treasurer; Mesdames Marion R. Moore, DeLois Hill, Arthur Wiseberg, Ernest Otley, Thomas Kenan, William A. Smith, Edward Cerf, Joel Hunter Sr., Ewing Dean, Homer Ledbetter and Allan Artley.

Palms and ferns banked the altar, branched candelabra holding lighted white tapers being used to flank the greenery, which was centered with an arch of lighted tapers. Placed in front of this was a floor basket filled with Easter lilies and white larkspur. Urns of similar flowers were placed at either end of the altar, and sprays of Easter lilies marked the family pews.

She carried a white straw garden hat filled with pastel flowers and tied with pink satin ribbon.

All in the Game

BY JACK TROY

Point of View If you think that the sudden removal of baseball ticker tapes from all the old, familiar places because of alleged police threats doesn't make sense, just stick around a second.

Here in Atlanta the sale or consumption of beer after midnights and all day Sundays is forbidden, but one may consume an "all out" hard beverage all night and on Sundays, too, in public places.

It is permissible for people to purchase alcoholic beverages in dispensaries, but any gathering around a baseball ticker tape is discouraged. (Somebody might wager a bob or three on his favorite team. Fancy that!)

It's all in the way you look at it. They call it speculation in the stock market, and there are great exchanges where people gather and gamb—I mean, speculate.

At the nation's great race tracks, where hundreds of thousands pour the coin of the realm through the hoppers, it is dignified by the term, "pari-mutuel wagering."

But just let a group of Joe Fans gather at tavern or pool room and put their money where their mouth is, as the saying goes, and it is construed as out-and-out gambling.

In actuality, it is no different from most other forms of speculation or wagering in this country.

I do not mean to imply that I'm advocating any form of it, but I do think that consistency is a splendid virtue. And I am not going to fool myself that folks aren't going to do a thing to excess when they are told, "you can't do that."

What has happened in the wagering on fly balls, etc., at Ponce de Leon park? If you said nothing, you have the correct answer.

This is a free country. Or at least that's what we are led to believe.

Worth a Try On the theory that Atlanta has played "Atlas" long enough in the Southern League, it may be that a change of towns would be desirable.

There are too many non-drawing Tennessee towns in the league. And the only reason they aren't drawing any worse in Louisiana is that there's only one town in the league.

I was surprised to find that an old Tennessean, Ralph McGill, former Constitution sports editor, agreed that it might be desirable to substitute Savannah, Jacksonville and Mobile for New Orleans, Nashville and Chattanooga.

Of course, Bill Keefe, Fred Russell and Wirt Gammon aren't going to like this suggestion, but Atlanta is hump-backed from carrying such a heavy burden.

Savannah is one of the great drawing towns in Class B. Jacksonville, Fla., is enjoying its greatest boom, while Mobile is the top boom town in Alabama.

I don't know exactly what you could say for New Orleans, Nashville and Chattanooga, except that the food is wonderful in New Orleans, the Parisian capital of America.

I am sure that nothing ever will be done about it. So Atlanta simply remains in the position of very good neighbor. And the whole Southern League neighborhood annually makes a grand and glorious "touch."

Memorable Meet Coach Alexander, whose Georgia Tech football team yesterday ended spring drills, was in a story-telling mood before practice and told of a recent track meet between Alabama and Tech.

Tech didn't figure, in the advance dope, to make a great showing against the superior Tide-men. As the events wore on to the finish, however, and only the broad jump remained, Tech had a chance, by taking a first and third, to win.

On a nearby field, Alabama and Ole Miss baseball teams were playing. Center-fielder Hughes was a star broad jumper and he was hurriedly summoned. He left the game before an inning was over.

Hughes jumped about 23 feet in his baseball shoes and won the event, but Alabama jumpers also were second and third. So they really didn't need Hughes, could have won without him.

Meanwhile, Ole Miss tied the baseball game and Alabama wanted to put Hughes back in the lineup. Ole Miss refused and then went on to beat the Tide-men.

It was quite a day, as Track Coach George Griffin pointed out.

Travelin' Man Coach Alex also was telling Buck Flowers about an incident in one of the recent Tech scrimmages.

McHugh, Alex says, runs a lot like Red Barron. He doesn't follow his interference. He's one of those natural, shifty runners.

Anyway, he banged through a hole in the line the other day and it was funny to see the guards, who were supposed to be running interference, frantically trying to catch up with him, Alex said. And then McHugh ran past the line backers so fast that they bumped heads trying to make the tackle.

McHugh is a good punter and between him and Johnny Bosch Tech ought to do all right in the kicking department. Bosch is the leading passer. Davey Eldredge is largely a runner.

Stout Collides With Burge, Injures Back

Hurler Is Hurt Fielding Popups; Pels Open Series Tonight.

By JACK TROY.

The Crackers won their 27th game of the season the hard way as they defeated the Birmingham Barons, 3 to 2, for the third win of the four-game series. The Barons finally scored after 27 scoreless innings.

Allyn Stout was pitching brilliant baseball going into the third inning when he collided with Lester Burge in scrambling for a pop-up. Stout left the game suffering from a back injury. Jinx Poindexter relieved.

Poindexter continued holding the Barons scoreless until the eighth when Rival Pitcher Henry Johnson hit a triple to center. This proved the undoing of Poindexter, who hasn't finished a game since he has been back in the Cracker doghouse. After the mighty triple, Bevell followed with a single, scoring Johnson. Then Poindexter hit Gamble and Manager Richards promptly jerked the eccentric left-hander.

POINDEXTER "SHOWED."

Ed Heusser came in from the bullpen and gave up a hit. Luce singled to right, scoring Bevell. That was the end of the Baron scoring, however. The next two batters went down in order, and in the ninth Heusser, the master, faced only three batters.

Poindexter was credited with a victory, his sixth of the season, but he can thank Heusser for it.

Scoring runs in the first, third and sixth, the Crackers were ahead of the Barons all the way. The league leaders made the most of their six hits.

In the shuffle of pitchers, the Barons got a total of only seven hits, and except for Henry Johnson's triple did no slugging at all.

There was a brilliant performance by the Cracker keystone combination. Two double plays of the lightning variety were turned in by the combination of Bergmann, Ryan and Burge.

The extent of Pitcher Stout's injury was undetermined. He appeared to have nothing more serious than a strained back.

Hard-hitting Buddy Bates, who has been in a batting slump, was given a rest and Pete Thomassie, playing center, scored two of the three runs and got two of the six hits.

Clutch Hitter Charlie Glock actually won the game when he drove in Marshall, who had doubled, in the sixth.

PELS HERE TONIGHT.

Having won 27 out of the first 32 games, the Crackers tonight take on a new foe, the New Orleans Pelicans, in the first of a three-game series.

Rene Cortes, a New Orleans boy who has won four games, will pitch against the Ray Blades outfit.

Warmer weather prevailed for the final game of the Birmingham series and a crowd of almost 5,000 saw the Crackers come through again.

In the first Thomasie was safe on Johnson's error; Mailho walked and all hands were safe on Ryan's fielder's choice. Marshall grounded out to first and Thomasie scored. Burge then walked and Glock did a rare thing by hitting into a double play.

Thomasie led off the third with a double and scored on Ryan's infield out as the Crackers went two runs ahead.

Another run was added in the sixth when Marshall doubled and scored on Glock's single.

Scoreless until the eighth, the Barons routed Poindexter but were stopped by Heusser. Johnson broke up a scoreless ball game for the Barons by tripling to the temporary stands in center. Bevell came through with a single and Johnson scored the Barons' first run.

Reds Pay $35,000 for Koy Ernie Was Part of Medwick Deal

CINCINNATI, May 14.—(P)—The world champion Cincinnati Reds took the rubber band off the bank roll tonight and bought hard-hitting Outfielder Ernie Koy from the St. Louis Cardinals for something like $35,000.

General Manager Warren C. Giles announced the straight-cash deal shortly after the Reds had suffered their fourth straight defeat on their home grounds, this time at the hands of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

He said that Koy would go straight to left field. He was part of the deal that sent Joe Medwick from St. Louis to the Dodgers last year.

The Reds, lacking the punch that carried them to the championship last year and in 1939, now are in sixth place in the National League.

Dykes Through As Player—CHICAGO, May 14.

The rotund man with the massive cigar, 44-year-old Jimmy Dykes, manager of the White Sox, announced yesterday that he would remove his name from the active player list to make way for younger players. Except for pinch-hitting, Dykes' regular playing days ended in 1938. Dykes' 23-year playing career included a stretch with the Atlanta Crackers in 1919.

9-Iron Is Suggs' Big Problem; It Worked Well at Memphis

By AL SHARP.

Several months ago, Louise Suggs, Dorothy Kirby and this dub were playing at Capital City.

When we came to the eighth hole, Louise used a 9-iron for her short shot to the green. Dot, I think, used an 8-iron. The duffer made his stab at the flag with a 4-iron. I happened to be closer to the stick than the rest.

So I asked why they preferred the more lofted clubs for such chip shots. Dot stayed on the green a few moments to practice putting, and Louise supplied the answer.

"The 9-iron may be harder to handle on such a shot," Louise said in different words, "but I have a little theory about playing the hard way."

"If I can play that 9-iron, I gain confidence in every club. It's the toughest for me. The short game is the one that bothers me most, you know."

"And when I've conquered the 9-iron—got to the point where I play it well and with confidence—I have conquered golf."

So I thought about Little Bit and the 9-iron when I heard about her victory over Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page. And I thought about it some more when she defeated Mrs. Dan Chandler, 7 and 6, for the Southern title at Memphis Saturday.

It was the first thing I asked her about after congratulating her on the victory.

"Yes," she answered, "I had that 9-iron working all the way. I kept using it with success, and I practiced with it all week. Between matches I'd go out to practice with that 9-iron. Folks could not understand why I practiced so much with it. They wondered why I didn't practice wood shots or long irons."

"But I still have that theory about the 9-iron. If I can hit it well, the woods and the other irons and even the putter seem to work better. It's the confidence it brings."

And in those words, you probably have the psychology of one golf champion—the Little Girl with the Big Swing.

Bill Ayres Hurls Buford's 18th Win

MARIETTA, Ga., May 14.—Big Bill Ayres, Buford fireballer, hurled his third successive shutout here this afternoon, blanking the Marietta nine, 7-0. It was Buford's eighteenth consecutive victory.

The Shoemakers shelled Al Williams, former Cracker hurler, for 12 hits. Russ Lyons paced the hitters with a triple and two singles. Herrin, McQuinn and Shipley had two each.

The Shoemakers will play Grove Park Thursday night in Buford at 8:15 o'clock.

Harry Gumbert Sent to Cards For Bill McGee

Giants Also Get Cash; Neither Hurler Has Been in Form.

ST. LOUIS, May 14.—(P)—Fiddler Bill McGee, husky pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, was traded today to the New York Giants for Pitcher Harry Gumbert and an unspecified amount of cash. Both are right-handers.

McGee, a product of Batchtown, Ill., won 16 games and lost 10 for the Cardinals last season, against Gumbert's record of 12 and 14. Neither has been able to get going this season.

Gumbert won his first start but was taken out of the box in his succeeding four efforts. He joined the Giants in 1935 and had his best year in 1938, when he won 18 and lost 11.

McGee had three trials with the Cardinals before he stuck in 1938. He won 12 and dropped only five the following year. This season he participated in four games and was charged with one defeat. He has yet to chalk up his first victory.

The Cardinals also optioned Outfielder Harry Walker to Columbus, the American Association farm club with which he played last year.

Dixsteel Wallops Power Nine, 14-1

Battling for first place in the Commercial League of the Atlanta Amateur Baseball Federation, Dixsteel lashed out 18 hits yesterday to engulf Georgia Power, 14 to 1, in a game postponed from early season.

While Hayes was doling out six hits, no two to a man, Bill Belcher and Company were clouting for distance. Belcher's two doubles and two singles paced the attack. Vanzant and J. D. Patterson garnered three hits each, and Shuck Patterson, A. Smith and S. Smith spanked two each, the latter having a double and triple. Vanzant's diving one-handed stop of Humphries' grounder over third, recovery and throw to nip the runner at first was the fielding feature.

Punctures are sealed through compression of the pure rubber specially cured inner tread, which grips and holds the puncturing object. When that object is withdrawn, the hole is mechanically sealed through compression of the heavy tread. These tubes pay for themselves in out-wearing 4 to 5 sets of tires. They prevent bruise breaks of tires and hold a uniform air pressure for weeks at a time, thus wearing more slowly and giving you longer mileage.

House Member Fears Results Of Fish Laws

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—Fear that legislation (HR3361) for a 10 per cent excise tax on manufacturers' sales of sport fishing equipment would give the secretary of the interior dictatorial control over state game fisheries was expressed at a hearing today by members of the House Fisheries Committee.

William S. Snow, Virginia game and inland fisheries commissioner and general counsel of the American Fisheries Association, a commercial organization, told the committee the legislation might enable the federal government to regulate commercial fishing in coastal salt water areas.

"There is always danger in an act of this kind," he testified. "We don't want the government to be telling the state of Virginia that in order to get the benefit of this tax we must let it take control of our commercial fishing."

Elmer Higgins, of the Fish and Wildlife Service, an Interior Department agency, testified, however, that any fish management projects initiated under the act would originate with the states and would be required merely to meet certain federal standards.

The legislation, he said, would enable the government to "aid the states more than ever before under a well-planned national program."

E. E. Le Compté, Maryland state game warden, also endorsed the proposal.

The committee decided to continue hearings until some time in June, when commercial fishermen will appear.

Pay Doubled; Jerome To Aid Young Hurlers

Charley Gilbert To Be Brought Up From Montreal Farm Today.

By EARL HILLIGAN.
CHICAGO, May 14.—(AP)—The inimitable Dizzy Dean tried to quit baseball today, but wound up by moving from the Chicago Cubs' bench to the club's coaching lines—at double pay.

In a surprise move which climaxed a day of Dean developments and actually left the once great pitcher momentarily speechless, the Cubs refused Dean's request for voluntary retirement, gave him his unconditional release and signed him as a coaching aide to Manager Jimmy Wilson.

"Boy, has this club been good to me," said Dean when the Cub general manager, James Gallagher, announced Dean would remain with the team. That short remark summed up Dean's case. For the Cubs gave Dean a new contract as a coach, starting his pay today, and will also give him the remainder of his reported $10,000 player contract at the end of the season.

Thus ends—for at least a year—the playing career of one of baseball's great pitchers, one who won 30 games and lost only seven for St. Louis Cardinals in 1934 and who in six seasons as a Cardinal averaged 22 wins a year.

That was before Ol' Diz, whose colorful escapades, suspensions and salary holdouts made him the "newsiest" figure in the game, came to Chicago in April, 1938—costing the Cubs $185,000 cash and three players.

That year Dizzy played a part in the Cub pennant-winning drive, winding up with a seven won and one lost record. But the next two seasons, when he could win only nine games against seven losses, brought disappointment and heartbreak. Even a flaming competitive spirit could not overcome his side-arm "nothing ball" and he was knocked from the box repeatedly. During those two years he said he visited about 100 physicians and last year asked to be sent to Tulsa, where he won eight and lost eight tilts.

TO TRY NEXT YEAR.
But even today, as he decided to quit as a player, his heart would not allow him to say "This is final."

"I'm going to coach a year," he said, "and try to pitch once more after a year of rest for my arm. If I can't pitch then, I'll be through for good."

Gallagher and Manager Wilson both paid tribute to that Dean spirit, Gallagher remarking: "He's too valuable a baseball man to wind up in the minors—or picking cotton. He'll be of great value helping young pitchers."

Dean, who reportedly received contracts of $20,000, $20,000 and $10,000 for three seasons for the Cubs, said he hurt his arm against Boston in 1937, 10 days after breaking his toe in the 1937 all-star game. Gone from that day, he said, was the burning speed and tireless durability which had seen him "fog 'em through" to almost single-handedly carry the Cardinals to the 1934 pennant and world championship against the Detroit Tigers.

BLANKED TIGERS.
He beat the Tigers, 11 to 0, in the decisive game of that series and that six-hit performance, he said, was his greatest baseball thrill.

Dean, whose graying hair belies the 30-year age the record book lists for him, was the first player to sign with the Cubs for the 1940 season and his reported $10,000 contract caused a rumble of discontent among some players. In his only start this season he lasted one inning against Pittsburgh, allowing three hits and three runs.

The Dean manipulation aided the Cubs in their effort to get down to the club player limit of 25, which they did tonight by optioning two players—First Baseman Ed Waitkus, to Tulsa of the Texas League, and Left-hand Pitcher Ed Raffensberger, to St. Paul of the American Association.

General Manager Gallagher also said that Charley Gilbert, rookie outfielder obtained along with cash from the Brooklyn Dodgers in the deal for Billy Herman, would leave the Dodgers' Montreal farm tomorrow to report here.

Superb Putting Wins Tourney For McSpaden

BROOKLINE, Mass., May 14.—(AP)—The unusually heavy 21-ounce putter favored by Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Winchester, proved the ideal weapon for the Country Club's slow and grainy greens today when he put together two subpar rounds of 70 and 68 to set a new pro course record and win the "Big Eight" 36-hole medal golf tournament for the British War Relief Society.

Favored by the gallery of 5,000, since he was the only Greater Boston pro in the star-studded competition, McSpaden totaled 14 one-put greens while turning in his 138 total, which was three strokes better than that of his closest rival, Ben Hogan, golf's leading money winner, who boosted his season's earnings to $8,367 with the runnerup award of $300.

Byron Nelson, the P. G. A. titlist, finished third with 143. Three tied for fourth honors with 145—Lawson Little, the National Open champion; Jimmy Demaret and Craig Wood, winner of the Masters'. Sammy Snead was seventh with 146 and Bomber Jimmy Thomson, who got off to a woeful 79-start, trailed the carefully selected field with 152, though he won the driving contest with a 276-yard clout against the wind.

NATIONAL COTTON WEEK

—Launching of the 11th annual National Cotton Week this Friday, May 16, finds the cotton industry mor- optimistic concerning the future of cotton in America than at any time since the war virtually shut off American cotton exports. Charles K. Everett, merchandising director of the Cotton Textile Institute, said as he disclosed complete plans for the merchandising event.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "the outlook for cotton is brighter today than in many years because domestic consumption is rising sensationally. Whereas five or six years ago many warehouses in the limit of American consumption, mills today are operating on the basis of better than a 10,000,000 bale annual domestic consumption. And, while the national defense program, and the purchasing power it has created, is responsible for a percentage of the increased demand in this country, normal civilian demand for cotton goods exceeds anything previously known."

BLAIR CONTROLLER

—Stanley T. Blair, who has been assistant controller of Cluett, Peabody & Co., Inc., has been elected controller of the company, succeeding H. W. Woodruff, who will now make his headquarters at the New York executive offices, assisting E. C. Pfeffer, vice president in charge of sales. Mr. Woodruff will assume all the responsibility for accounting, credits, collections, warehousing, and office procedure in all salesrooms.

MOVING TONS OF ORE

—More than 25,000 tons of ore, containing 500,000 pounds of copper—vital to national defense—will be hauled each day from an Arizona mine by nine powerful electric locomotives built at the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, it is announced. The first six of these locomotives have already been sent to the Morenci, Ariz., mine of the Phelps Dodge Corporation and the other three are nearly ready to leave. The locomotives, built at the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, it is announced.

THE AMERICAN NAVY

Inventive U. S. Watches Foreign Fleets Put Its Own Genius Into Practical Use

This is the fourth of a series of articles in which will be told the story of America's growth in naval strength from the days of the Revolution to today.

By WILLIAM G. KEY.

A second action against the Barbary pirates, and the hold on public opinion gained by the brilliant naval actions of the War of 1812 delayed for a few years the reaction against naval expenditures that has marked the history of this country after every war except the Spanish-American.

But by 1820 the blow fell, and naval construction was slowed down sharply despite the fact that the fleet still was not strong enough, either in capital ships or other fleet units, to perform the function we conceive today as that of the United States fleet—the immobilization or destruction of an enemy in his home bases, or at least far from the shores of this country.

Yet, by this year the Navy had embarked upon a program calling for the establishment of squadrons in the Mediterranean, in the West Indian and East Indian service, off the coast of Brazil and in the Pacific. They were required for the protection of commerce. It is interesting to note that as far back as 1826 a small squadron was operating in the South Atlantic, mostly off the Brazilian coast. It followed the declaration of the Monroe Doctrine and recognized even in that day of embryonic sea power the danger inherent in a lack of strong naval forces south of the Equator and the probability of European aggression against a virtually unprotected continent.

Merchantmen Flourish.
In the 1830's the gallant U. S. S. Constitution and a second frigate, the U. S. S. Potomac, with two smaller vessels comprised the Mediterranean squadron; the U. S. S. Constellation and four smaller ships, the West Indian squadron; two light warships, the Sloop Erie and Ontario, operated off the coast of Brazil; the Pacific fleet consisted of a frigate, the U. S. S. Brandywine, and four smaller ships, while in the East Indies, a sloop and a schooner guarded the merchantmen of the United States, by then in their heyday. This was in the day of the clipper ships, when the merchant marine of this country was established at a peak never again comparably equalled.

By 1836, the Navy had slumped to a point at which even the Commissioners of the Navy—professional sailors—advocated the retention of only five capital ships (mounting 74 or more guns) in commission, with only two of these to be used in active service. When Martin Van Buren took office as President of the United States in 1837, the Navy was at a low in morale, in ships and in the inventiveness and imagination necessary to cope with the rapidly approaching conversion from sail to steam. Just as this country in our generation pioneered in the dive bomber and the parachute trooper, only to see them brought to their most effective use by a foreign nation, so it was with the warship propelled by steam. The first such vessel was the strange and unwieldy sea-going ironclad tub known variously as the Fulton and Demologos, built during the War of 1812 and then laid up at the Brooklyn Navy Yard until it was destroyed by explosion in 1829.

Development Delayed.
A second steam vessel, also named the Fulton, was launched in 1837, designed to sail forth from port just far enough to break up any attacking force of sailing vessels. But Van Buren's secretary of the Navy, James K. Paulding, would have nothing to do with the "sea monsters" and the older officers of the Navy delightedly supported him in stemming any progress toward development in this country of the clanking and sooty steamer. One can hardly blame them, in a way, for not wanting to give up their trim, clean-lined and clean-handling sailing ships, with their holy-stoned decks and spotless quarters for a noisy, coal-burning, awkward sea-going machine shop, for decks covered with soot and with men grimy from the dirt and heat of the engine rooms roaring about. It is well to remember that even today a true sailor's heart quickens to the beauty of a sailing vessel and that sailing still is taught at Annapolis (because it still is considered the best way to teach seamanship, and, at Annapolis, has certain social advantages).

(To digress a little, there is an interesting story told in connection with the study of seamanship and navigation at the Naval Academy. Macdonough Hall first was built for the purpose, but when ancient Fort Screven was torn down in 1909 to permit construction of an addition to Bancroft Hall, the Academy dormitory and the largest structure of its kind in the world, gymnastic activities were transferred to Macdonough Hall and it gradually became the academy gymnasium. Eventually the Academy asked congress for funds to construct a seamanship and navigation building. A venerable legislator with a memory longer than that of the sea-dogs wanted to know what had happened to the earlier building, and it was only after considerable explanation that funds were obtained for the new structure under the proviso that it be clearly labeled. Luce Hall today, in great letters carved into the granite walls, tells all who come that there is taught "Seamanship and Navigation." It is the only building at the Academy so labeled.)

Neither the naval bureaucracy nor the secretary could stem the march of steam, though, and congressional demands made in the face of the increasing use of steam in the British and French navies forced the Navy to consent to the construction of three additional steam vessels, designed and built by Captain Matthew C. Perry, who later made his niche in history as commodore in command of the memorable expedition to Japan in the 1850's. There still was little comprehension, either in the congress or in the Navy, of the ultimate revolution in naval history to be wrought by the introduction of steam and the development of the explosive shell. By 1846 Britain had 141 war steamships, France 68 and the United States—seven. Again this country saw the development by Americans of revolutionary procedures only to see foreign countries convert them to their advantage and our disadvantage. It is somewhat disconcerting to find this trend all through our history. One of the 1839 steamers was constructed with a screw propeller rather than the then standard paddle-wheel. It (the U. S. S. Princeton) proved its worth, yet the Navy for several years more continued to build vulnerable paddle-wheel vessels and even completed sailing vessels at a time when every other large navy in the world was feverishly rebuilding fleets of screw-type propulsion ships.

The same thing occurred in the instance of the iron-clad, of which this country began construction of the first in the world. Known as the Stevens Battery, it wasn't even finished, although it was known then the explosive shell would make a bloody shambles of a wooden ship. There were wooden heads as well in wooden ships in the Navy of that day, blocking the genius of the few officers who could have given this country an advantage over any other in the world and possibly could have prevented or would at least have greatly shortened the War Between the States. It was not until that war this country built an iron-clad war vessel, and then it was the south that sent the first, a rebuilt steam frigate, into action.

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—Previous to 9:48 a. m. is the better portion of the day, when you should make every effort to get conditions set in motion for progress. Between 9:48 a. m. and 7:50 p. m. care should be used to hold poise and do not take on new obligations.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—There is likely to be too much talking, too fast driving and bickering previous to 1:13 p. m. Heated arguments will not pay, and caution in conferences, trading, traveling, dealings with close relatives should be in order. The remainder of the day tends to lack of caution, carelessness and extravagance in speech as well as action. Be careful.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—Throughout the entire day and evening you are likely to have an overstrained, nervous and irritable feeling. The period does not especially favor new plans and ideas. Being alone, or at least holding your feelings in check, more will be accomplished.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—Before 8:13 a. m. your personal and especially your home duties may have a tendency towards strain and you may be expecting too much. After 1:12 p. m. favors sticking to routine.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—Before 7:45 a. m. guard against any unpremeditated action, rashness in travel and speech. Between 7:45 a. m. and 9:33 p. m. advancement may be made in affairs pertaining to younger people, social ideas and pleasures. An auspicious day for dealings with relatives.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—Previous to 2:03 p. m.

the influences about which bring impetus and an irritable feeling, therefore you may be lacking in your usual calm and self-control. Not an especially auspicious time for making changes. Stick to routine.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—Before 11:46 a. m. does not especially favor new or important undertakings. This period favors finishing up old tasks and undertakings. Quite the reverse is true for the remainder of the day favoring general business, social contacts, and undertaking new plans.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—Previous to 3:20 p. m. favors domestic interests, general business and dealings that require a friendly atmosphere. After 3:20 p. m. favors agreements, contracts and legal matters.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—The entire day and evening may be considered favorable for all lines of endeavor. An excellent day for being active and energetic in promoting matters in which you are especially interested. The afternoon of the day more favorable than previous to 2:27 p. m.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—Previous to 9:17 a. m. the influences may incline you to jump into things that you know nothing of, therefore, be discreet in all that you do. From 9:17 a. m. throughout the remainder of the day and evening let nothing hold you down. Encourage all matters that look promising.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—Now is the time to go after the things that you have been dreaming. Matters that have been almost anything that is important. An excellent time to advance business interests, whether commercialized or artistic. After 4:32 p. m. favors travel, dealings with brothers and sisters.

Lee Slaying Recalled by Brunswick Suit

Atlanta Law Firm Seeks To Enjoin Property at St. Simons.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. BRUNSWICK, Ga., May 14.—A case was filed in Glynn superior court yesterday which recalled the sensational slaying of the Rev. Charles H. Lee, rector of Christ church on St. Simons Island several years ago. It is a case filed by Howard, Tiller and Howard, Atlanta law firm, against H. J. Cofer, Mrs. H. J. Cofer and the Golden Isle Hotel Amusement Company et al., asking for the appointment of a receiver for the island property.

William Schley Howard, a member of the law firm, was employed by the Cofer's as an associate counsel in the Lee case when the Negro, George Clayborn, was tried here. Howard assisted in the defense of the Negro who was convicted and is now serving a life sentence on the charge of murder. The new suit charges that the Cofer's are indebted to the law firm in the sum of approximately $2,000, including attorney's fees and costs. The plaintiffs ask for the appointment of a receiver for the Golden Isle Amusement property, alleging that H. J. Cofer has conveyed all of his property to the company and that it is in his wife's name.

Judge Gordon Knox received the petition and has issued an order restraining the company from conveying or in any way disposing of its property and the hearing for the application for receivership will be heard at Hazlehurst May 31.

Doctors Hear Of Gold Use For Arthritis

Dr. Elkin Discusses Treatment of Heart Ailment.

MAON, Ga., May 14.—(P)—Gold is being used to treat rheumatoid arthritis, the disease that cripples, but never kills, thousands of persons in the United States annually.

Ranking with cancer as one of the two great mysteries of the medical world, chronic arthritis and rheumatism claim more victims each year than either heart disease, cancer or tuberculosis.

In an address before the Medical Society of Georgia, Dr. Russell L. Cecil, professor of clinical medicine at Cornell University, said the three most widely used and discussed forms of treatment are vaccine, vitamin D therapy and gold therapy.

While streptococcus vaccines appear to help in certain cases, Dr. Cecil said, it is disappointing in many others and the same thing applies to the use of concentrated vitamin D.

As for the gold treatment, Dr. Cecil acknowledged that results had not been altogether successful, but "when we have said that gold is the best single agent for the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis, we have not made a sensational statement, for certainly most other forms of treatment are very disappointing."

The physicians also heard a prediction from Dr. Daniel C. Elkin, professor of surgery at Emory University, that it was not beyond the realm of possibility that many heart diseases "will in a greater measure be removed from the realm of medical treatment and be taken over by the surgeon."

The chief difficulty in cardiac surgery, he said, "is the narrow margin of safety under which the heart works and the fact that no satisfactory means has been found for sustaining artificially the function of the heart while its circulation is suspended."

It is only natural, the surgeon said, for patients with heart disease to seek surgical aid "because of failure of medical care in the great majority of cases."

"In most instances," he continued, "the physician's aid is limited to the relief of suffering, to increasing the duration of life and to prolonging the period of economic usefulness. Chronic heart disease as it is generally understood is, by its very nature, incurable. In passing, it should be mentioned that certain types of cardiac disease may be relieved, or even cured, by extra cardiac operations."

Approximately 100 mothers who have received no medical care whatsoever die yearly in Georgia, Dr. H. F. Sharpley Jr., of Savannah, told the association here last night.

"More health education is still necessary to impress upon the expectant mother the value of early prenatal care," Dr. Sharpley stated.

Negro Migration Figures Reported

CHICAGO, May 14.—(P)—Dr. Samuel A. Stouffer, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago, estimated tonight that 403,000 Negroes migrated from the south to the north during the 1930-40 decade.

Among the reasons for the movement, he theorized, were the possibilities that "the Negro has been losing out, as compared with whites, in southern agriculture," and that more widespread relief in the north was an attraction.

Denver Man Buys Gun For Hess' Capturer

DENVER, May 14.—(P)—Denver's David McLean has bought Scotland's David McLean a new 12-gauge double-barrel shotgun.

Just as soon as the police sergeant read about the Scot capturing Rudolf Hess, the No. 3 Nazi, Denver's David McLean hurried to a store and made his purchase. Now he is seeking State Department permission to send it. The sergeant, whose father was born at Glasgow, Scotland, observed that Scotland's David McLean "might need something more than a pitchfork in case Hitler happens to land in the neighborhood."

90-Day Wonder Class Finishes At Annapolis

Academy's First Reserve Group Wins Ensign Rating.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 14.—(P) Farmer, lawyer, mechanic and state trooper—they're sailors all now, and willing to do their bit for Uncle Sam anywhere in the fleet.

They're the "90-day wonders" at the naval academy, 590 strong, who will receive ensigns' commissions in the Naval Reserve tomorrow at graduation exercises closing their "June week."

Last February 14 they left jobs as businessman, writer, artist, teacher, trooper, politician, radio announcer, farmer, lawyer, beer salesman and other occupations to join the first reservist class in academy history—at $65 a month.

Three months of hard studies and rigid Navy routine, and they paraded in full dress today in a way to do credit to the regular midshipmen, and gaily "dragged" their "dates" tonight to the graduation "hop." Maryland's Governor Herbert R. O'Connor will make the commencement address.

A poll by the year-book staff showed the majority of the class would receive less pay as Naval ensigns than by returning to civilian occupations; but 85 per cent have requested active duty immediately.

The reservists—numbering almost 700 at the start but with about 100 failing to meet physical or academic requirements—have become imbued with "academy spirit" and loyalty as strong as that of the midshipmen regiment.

The poll showed academy tradition and "atmosphere" appealed most to the reservists, with class members giving "honorable mention" to the food, beds, and "liberty."

Mrs. Wright, 78, Succumbs at Home

Mrs. Cynthia Sue Wright, 78, died yesterday at the residence, 355 Cherokee avenue, S. E., 10 days after the death of her son, Charlie P. Wright, a veteran policeman.

She was a native of Rockmart and moved to Atlanta 28 years ago. Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. W. H. Thrash; a son, E. C. Wright, of Rome; a daughter-in-law, Mrs. C. P. Wright; several grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at Park Avenue Baptist church. The Rev. L. E. Smith will officiate. Burial will be in College Park cemetery.

40 singers gave a generous evening of pleasing entertainment. The last half of the performance, including nursery rhymes and ballads, further proved the varied talents of Dr. Dewey's glee club. Blending in tone quality with comprehensive handling of the text, the group offers Atlanta a local treat any time they appear.

Emory Singers Score Success With Spirituals

Silver Anniversary Concert Presented in Glenn Auditorium.

By EUGENIA BRIDGES HARTY. Celebrating its silver anniversary with a salute to Atlanta, the Emory Glee Club sang its way into the hearts of an enthusiastic house of music lovers last night at the Glenn Memorial auditorium at Emory.

Particularly popular were the group of Negro spirituals, which Director Malcolm H. Dewey interprets better than any one we have ever heard. To the scheduled numbers, "Good News," "Go Down Moses" and "I Got Shoes," the chorus was forced to add four encores. With Larry Cantrell soloing in "Little David," Paul Guptill in "Methusalem," Was "Witness," Powers McLeod in "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" and "Steal Away," the audience still wanted some more.

The well-planned program began with a series of classical numbers that displayed the spectacular ability of the choral work as a whole. The "Echo Song," by Orlando Di Lasso, was outstanding in this group as well as the tongue-twisting repetitions of Vlovisky's "Hosanna Pomili"—reminiscent of the Cossack Chorus work.

Using three sympathetic accompanists—Dick Felder, Walker McElheney and Herman Allison, the
